

Waiting for Joe—Although Joe DiMaggio is out of action "indefinitely" with an injured leg, the New York Yankee star's uniform is ready and waiting for him. Cleaned and pressed, the suit with the big number five hangs in the Yanks' dressing room at Yankee Stadium, as the Bronx Bombers prepared for a DiMaggio-less opening day.

SPORTS & CRITIC

The day after the late lamented Detroit Red Wings swept out of the Stanley Cup picture we ran across a friend who is considerable of a hockey fan. We found him in a quandary, which is a tough spot to be in unless you are equipped with a map or compass, or else have a seeing eye dog.

(Which reminds us that the annual campaign for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind is about due, and if there is any organization which better deserves your support, we personally have never run across it.)

But to get back to this friend of ours. When we asked him just what was bugging him, he replied that he couldn't decide just what to do in regard to the Maple Leaf hockey team. "If that was the real Maple Leafs, I just saw flatten the Detroit," he said, "I am thinking seriously of consulting my lawyer, and I will ask him if I cannot sue the club for the return of all the money I spent on tickets throughout the regular season on the ground of false pretences."

We tried to soothe his injured feelings as best we could, telling him that maybe it was the real, blow-in-the-bottle Maple Leafs he had watched trying to untrack themselves during the months of October, November, January, February and March. "They wore the same uniforms," we said, "and they looked very much the same when posing for their pictures."

"Then in that case," he made answer, "I feel it is my bounden duty to go and report them to the stewards and demand a saliva test for every one connected with the outfit, with the exception, maybe, of Foster Hewitt and Wes McKnight, who gave their best at all times and didn't spare a touch." So we left him still wondering which course to take.

The International League season is just about to start as we write this and there is a long and dusty road to travel ere the pennant race is decided. But if the Toronto Baseball Club keeps up its present gait, we have no hesitation in predicting that ball fans of the Quince City and surrounding territory will have something more to draw them to the stadium than the prospect of watching a lot of noisy sun-bathers parked back of third base.

However, this will suffice regarding the Toronto ball team and the International League for the time being, but we hope to have more worth reporting at a later date. As a one-time resident of Toronto, and a long motorist in its vicinity, we would hate to have outsiders get the idea that hockey and football reading cover the full extent of its athletic additions.

While engineers of the New York Power and Light Corp. pondered plans for a hydro-electric dam on the Canadaga River, beavers moved in, built one 126 feet wide and 6 feet high, and flooded 15 acres. Confident it can be done, the engineers are completing their plans.

WES MCKNIGHT

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

AGENTS WANTED
Oils, Greases, Tires
Sole agents for...
PALESTINE
If, as, and when Israel is admitted to the United Nations, 50 flags will fly from 50 flagpoles at the entrance to the U.N.'s General Assembly building in New York. But it seems quite possible, at this writing, that one of those flagpoles will be there during the current session. The obstacle, of course, is the vexed question of Jerusalem.
Lying in the central region of Palestine, the heart of the holy places of Jerusalem, is a one-mile-square area enclosed by ancient walls. There stand most of the holy places of Jerusalem—places sacred to Christian, Jew and Moslem. Normally the population of the Old City is around 27,500, including 2,500 Jews.
Outside those walls is New Jerusalem, with a population of around 100,000 Jews and 100,000 Arabs.
The United Nations, in its original plan of partition, proposed to establish a Jewish state and an Arab state, with Jerusalem as an international area of some 280 square miles. The objective, was to assure free access to the holy places of Jerusalem for any and all religions of the world.
During the war of partition about a year ago, the armies of Israel and Trans-Jordan divided Jerusalem. Israel occupied the western sector, the modern business and residential quarters west of the Jews lived. King Abdullah's Trans-Jordan occupied the eastern sector, including the Old City. In the armistice of April 3, 1949, both sides recognized the other's hold on Jerusalem for the present.
The Israeli Government has said that it will not relinquish its part of Jerusalem, nor the corridor leading from there to Tel Aviv—and it has also proposed that the Old City be internationalized. Actually, however, Israel has indicated that she is not interested in the status of the Old City so long as she retains her part of Jerusalem.
Trans-Jordan has shown equal determination to keep its part of Jerusalem as long as Israel retains its sector. King Abdullah has made it clear that he will not consent to internationalization of the Old City unless all Jerusalem is placed under international administration.
In the United Nations debate over Israel's application for U.N. membership, the future of the holy places was a central theme. One group argued for immediate approval of the application; another wanted it referred to a committee for further study. The latter stand was supported by an encyclical of Pope Pius in which he urged "internationalization of Jerusalem and all other sacred places." Britain is generally sympathetic with the Arabs' position; the Scandinavian states, and the United States, are generally sympathetic with the Jews' position. The British Embassy here has been charged with the duty of finding and punishing the murderers of the Jewish people, Count Folke Bernadotte.
So it looks, at this moment, very much as though Israel will remain outside the United Nations, officially, for a while yet.

RUSSIA
For centuries there has been great speculation, from time to time, as to whether there is still anything of Noah's Ark remaining. According to the Book of Genesis, the Ark—a triple-decked vessel seven miles in length—"rested in the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains of Ararat."
These mountains are, at present, in Turkish territory, overlooking boundaries with Iran and Soviet Russia. Not long ago three Western archaeologists announced that they had the Turkish Government's permission to go and take a look for the Ark. One of the men is Egeron Sykes, a member of the British Geological Society and former British commercial attaché at Warsaw. Another is Hans Roosen, a Dutch student, while the third is Dr. E. A. Smith, of North Carolina. They have been trying to raise money for the expedition and hope to start for Turkey early this summer.
But the Russians see in the proposal nothing more than a spy plot against the United States, and have refused to give the expedition a permit to go. Dr. E. A. Smith, of North Carolina, has been trying to raise money for the expedition and hope to start for Turkey early this summer.
Every woman should remember that no man likes to come home to a supper of cold shoulder and hot tongue.

WHAT GOES ON IN THE WORLD
PALESTINE
If, as, and when Israel is admitted to the United Nations, 50 flags will fly from 50 flagpoles at the entrance to the U.N.'s General Assembly building in New York. But it seems quite possible, at this writing, that one of those flagpoles will be there during the current session. The obstacle, of course, is the vexed question of Jerusalem.
Lying in the central region of Palestine, the heart of the holy places of Jerusalem, is a one-mile-square area enclosed by ancient walls. There stand most of the holy places of Jerusalem—places sacred to Christian, Jew and Moslem. Normally the population of the Old City is around 27,500, including 2,500 Jews.
Outside those walls is New Jerusalem, with a population of around 100,000 Jews and 100,000 Arabs.
The United Nations, in its original plan of partition, proposed to establish a Jewish state and an Arab state, with Jerusalem as an international area of some 280 square miles. The objective, was to assure free access to the holy places of Jerusalem for any and all religions of the world.
During the war of partition about a year ago, the armies of Israel and Trans-Jordan divided Jerusalem. Israel occupied the western sector, the modern business and residential quarters west of the Jews lived. King Abdullah's Trans-Jordan occupied the eastern sector, including the Old City. In the armistice of April 3, 1949, both sides recognized the other's hold on Jerusalem for the present.
The Israeli Government has said that it will not relinquish its part of Jerusalem, nor the corridor leading from there to Tel Aviv—and it has also proposed that the Old City be internationalized. Actually, however, Israel has indicated that she is not interested in the status of the Old City so long as she retains her part of Jerusalem.
Trans-Jordan has shown equal determination to keep its part of Jerusalem as long as Israel retains its sector. King Abdullah has made it clear that he will not consent to internationalization of the Old City unless all Jerusalem is placed under international administration.
In the United Nations debate over Israel's application for U.N. membership, the future of the holy places was a central theme. One group argued for immediate approval of the application; another wanted it referred to a committee for further study. The latter stand was supported by an encyclical of Pope Pius in which he urged "internationalization of Jerusalem and all other sacred places." Britain is generally sympathetic with the Arabs' position; the Scandinavian states, and the United States, are generally sympathetic with the Jews' position. The British Embassy here has been charged with the duty of finding and punishing the murderers of the Jewish people, Count Folke Bernadotte.
So it looks, at this moment, very much as though Israel will remain outside the United Nations, officially, for a while yet.

CECHOSLOVAKIA
Quite a number of western diplomats and employees of foreign missions to Czechoslovakia have been "invited" to leave that country during the past year, on what appear to be very flimsy charges of "spying."
One case, which may have serious consequences, is that of Captain Philip Wildash, a British representative in the Allied Military Permit Office, which sanctions visits to and across the three western zones of Germany. He was expelled from Czechoslovakia last March, but the matter is by no means closed as yet.
The British Embassy here has been charged with the duty of finding and punishing the murderers of the Jewish people, Count Folke Bernadotte.
So it looks, at this moment, very much as though Israel will remain outside the United Nations, officially, for a while yet.

ROLL YOUR OWN BETTER CIGARETTES WITH MAJAL CIGARETTE TOBACCO

COCKSHUTT-OLIVER TRACTOR OWNERS

Now as always parts and service are available for all Oliver tractors in Ontario including those sold by the Cockshutt Tractor Company.

All Goodison-Oliver dealers are equipped to serve you. Why not drop in at the nearest Goodison-Oliver dealer today and see how they are ready to help you.

Write for the name of your nearest Goodison Dealer.

Goodison INDUSTRIES LIMITED

OUR LOCAL GOODISON-OLIVER DEALER IS

THE FARM FRONT

of us have heard of such as celery-fed ducks and, in some cases, of the milk-fed pig. But the milk-fed pig is not only a profitable animal, but also a profitable business. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

According to Prof. Frank M. Johnson, who is head of horticulture at the Ontario Agricultural College, the milk-fed pig is a profitable animal because it is a good feeder and a good grower. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

B. C. Wool On The Hoof

Now, something about the serious losses which seem bound to occur among baby pigs. Every good hog man knows that it is impossible to nail down all the causes for such losses. But there is a growing belief in the minds of many expert veterinarians and research men that undue chilling during the first twelve hours after farrowing is one of the most common and important factors involved.

Such chilling not only upsets the vital balance of blood sugar, but also lowers the pig's resistance to any disease—encouraging the growth of any bacteria that may be lurking about for a spot on which to pounce.

In their wild state, sows farrowed their pigs during the warmth of Spring sunshine, and on a bed of clean leaves. An efficient farmer should try, as best he can, to duplicate such natural environment by providing artificial heat when necessary, and strictly sanitary farrowing pens.

Canada produces gold for all the world. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

Canada produces gold for all the world. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

Canada produces gold for all the world. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

Canada produces gold for all the world. It is a business that is growing in popularity and is being practiced by many farmers in Ontario.

Some Facts About Elephants

An elephant's skin measures from one-eighth of an inch to two inches in thickness. It takes a year to tan an elephant's skin. Yet an ordinary fly can draw blood from it. The average life span of an elephant is 50 years, and its average weight three tons.

Elephants suffer from pneumonia, colds, consumption, tumors, flat feet and corns. When they become ill, their trainers take care of these exactly as if they were humans. If they have a cough, a steel instrument is held to their mouths open while the trainers put giant pills down the animals' throats.

Elephants have to be taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus.

Elephants have to be taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus.

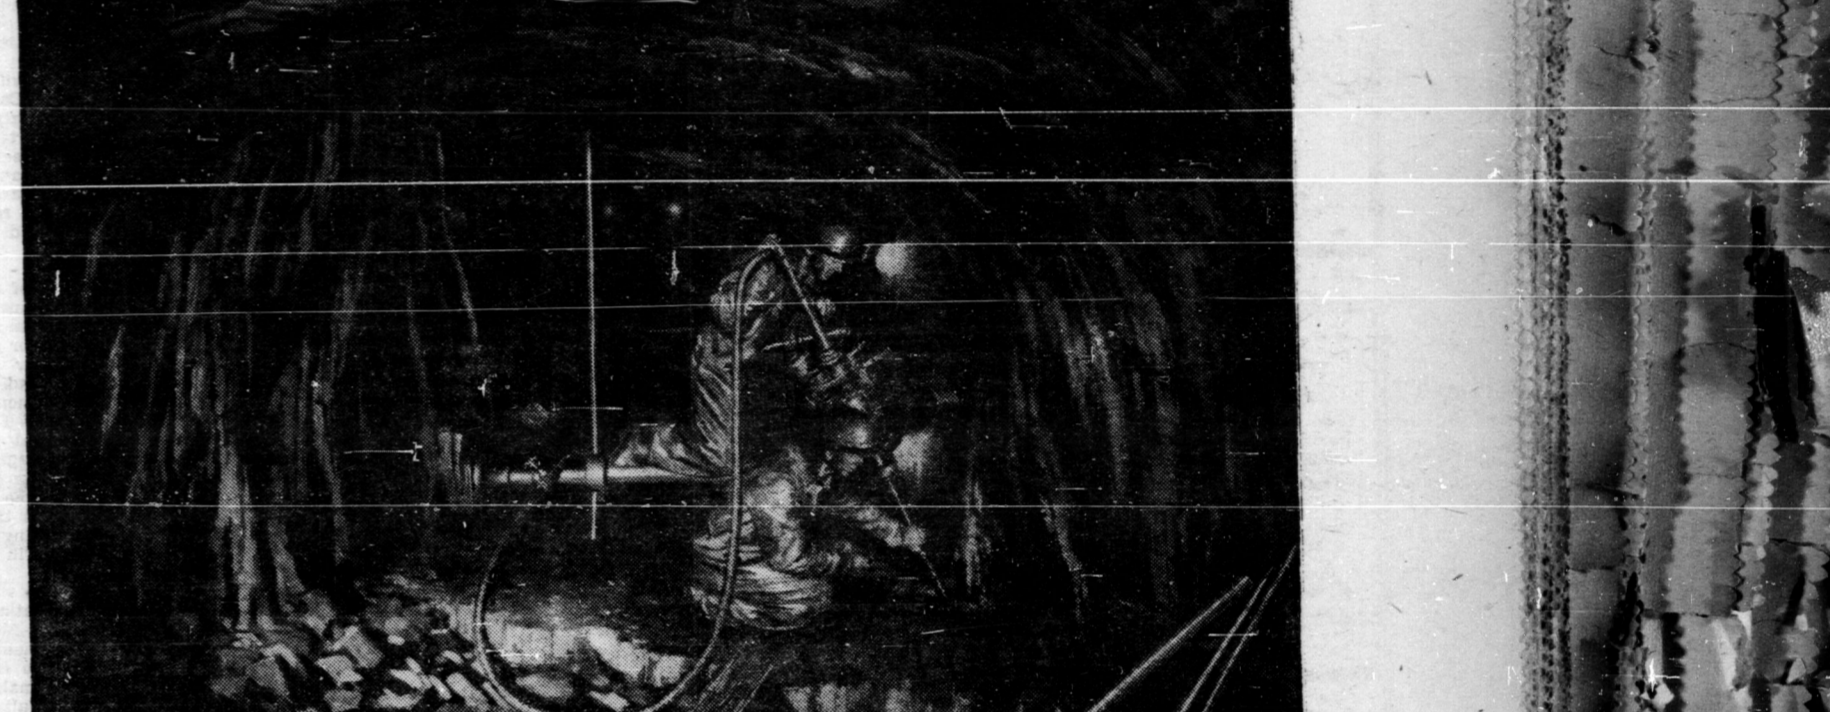

Elephants have to be taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus.

Elephants have to be taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus.

Elephants have to be taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus.

Elephants have to be taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus. They are taught to like peanuts after they come to the circus.

CANADA PRODUCES GOLD FOR ALL THE WORLD

Canada, world's second largest producer of gold, exports more than ninety-five percent of her product—an important contribution to the world's supply of this universal medium of international exchange.

Why Seagram's sells Canada first

This is an adaptation of one of a series of advertisements which, for the past two years, The House of Seagram has published in magazines and newspapers printed in many languages and countries throughout the world. These advertisements feature various Canadian products—adver, salmon, furs, nickel, apples, plywood and many others.

Nature has endowed our country with an almost limitless supply of valuable resources. Properly used and converted to manufactured goods, these resources can carry our nation to unprecedented greatness. But first, the peoples of other lands must learn of the prestige and quality of Canadian products.

One out of every three dollars we Canadians earn comes to us as a result of foreign trade. This campaign is designed to help all Canadian industries and, consequently, to help put money in the pockets of every Canadian citizen.

The House of Seagram

LITTLE REGGIE

By Margaritha