Clipped: B.C. government had had to increase the tax for "free" people with "free" health services. It simply recognizes the fact that a government which under-takes to provide health services has to pay for them by reducing the power of the citizens to buy something else. "Free" health services are simply an announcement that the public do not think enough of health to spend an adequate proportion of income on it, so the state must step in and correct these bad habits.

Two British travellers, short of cash in the U.S.A., sold a pint of blood to a hospital for $20.00. Taking into account World Wars I and II the writer calculates the value of blood and possibly every ounce of gold in Fort Worth. — Yarmouth Light.

The Courtenay-Cornox (B.C.) Argus comments on the increase proposed for radio licenses says: "It is quite true the worker is still getting a much bigger slice of the producer dollar than ever before but he can't be expected to sit tight when he sees government holding out their hands for more."

The Bridgewater (N.S.) Bulletin claims ten cents a pound for apples is entirely too high a price to pay. "We are a lot of easy suckers and so long as the buyer is willing to pay the price, the high prices will remain."

This is a "good and pleasant" philosopher from the High River, Alta. Times, adding: "The joy which one feels in arriving on home grounds after being away is common experience. Most of the things that we do in arriving on home grounds are the same. This is the land for me." Probably all over the country from Halifax to Vancouver other people turning homeward have the same thoughts. They see beauties and desirabilities which may not be apparent to the transient traveler.

Lotteries and raffias are here to stay thinks the Aymer, Ont., Gazette, and claims it logical to revise the statutes and acknowledge the situation, or else get down to brass tacks and enforce it to the letter. It claims authorities in many instances are ignoring the law in some cases, not in others.

Believe it or not: The textile industry in Canada now employs 150,000 persons in making textiles and clothing, and in terms of dollar value the annual production of Canada's primary textile industry is larger than our wheat crop, twice that of newspaper production and three times the value of gold produced annually.

Speaker Describes Life Of Eskimos

Lion Bill Addison gave a very interesting resume on the "Life of the Eskimo" at the Club meeting on Monday night last.

The names on the cenotaph will be the core of this list. They are north were revealed in detail by the speaker who read extensively on the subject.

He described them as a folk race, very improvident who lived on a diet of caribou, fish and seal. Contrary to popular opinion the Eskimo does not live in igloos but in tents made of skin and fur despite prevailing temperatures ranging from forty below zero to sixty below zero.
