"SALAM" ORANGE PEKOE

ANNE HIRST Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: Nine years ago, I married a man eight years younger than I. He comes from a good family. He is nice to me in so many ways even helping me clean and iron. He is so thoughtful, never forgetting birthdays or any other anniversaries.

"I don't dance or drink, and am not very strong on account of a serious operation.

"Just now, he is taking another woman out once or twice a month. I told him I knew about it, and I would leave him. He tells me he will go, and I could have the house.

"I have a boy by a previous marriage. No boy could have a better father than my husband is to him. He is a good boy, with manners, and much of his training is due to my husband.

"What shall I do? Tell him to go? Or to stay?" Mrs. J."

A Crisis

Apparently, you have made up your mind that you will not put up with your husband's taking any other woman out. He is as determined, I gather, to persist in the habit. His assurances that these women mean nothing to him, you evidently will not accept as true.

Do you believe your husband is being unfaithful?

I suppose you know that infidelity is very difficult to prove—and you would have to prove it to get a divorce.

You now must decide if you want to live with your husband as he is, or leave him and live alone. You faced such a period of loneliness before, after your first marriage. You know how it

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM by Gwendoline P. Clarke

There is no sign yet that spring is just around the corner, and yet there is a different feeling in the air. When the first snow flakes, the robins and crows are out looking for it, although there are huge drifts in every direction and many farm lanes are still impassable. Ours were too, if Bob hadn't plowed last week. Had he not plowed, the snow would be a high of 35 for today. We hope it won't warm up too suddenly so that means a lot of work, digging and snow-rolling so that the melting snow can find its way down to the crops.

That is a job that has always fascinated me. Time was when I used to love to get out with the shovel and rake her looking and digging here and there, help Partner divert the water into its proper channel, and watch it gurgle and clatter through the fast melting snow.

Well, that's what I made a trip to the city as I had been promising myself. In fact, I went twice. On the first trip, I was away two days, staying overnight with Daughter. And just imagine! I hardly spent any money at all. For one thing, I didn't have much money to spend and I didn't have much time, either. That meant spending all my time in the street cars as my friends seemed to live so far apart as the poles. So I went from Parkdale to Richmond Street; from Richmond to Forest Hill; Forest Hill to Moore Park; and finally to the Bay Street terminal. There I found Daughter waiting to see me. One man, Lazarus, had been dead four days when he came back at the Saviour's call. But all these endeavored dead again, and succumbed. There Jesus Christ himself was nailed to a cross, and He died, too.

On the third day, the unbelievable happened. Without assistance from the outside world, Jesus Christ arose. He laid aside the death garments and went forth from the tomb. The Roman soldiers, on guard to prevent this lifeless body being stolen by His disciples, themselves became as dead men.

"Death cannot keep His prey— Jesus, my Saviour! He tore the bars away—Jesus, my Lord from the grave He arose With a mighty triumph o'er His foes; He arose a Victor from the dark domain And He lives forever with the saints in glory!"

His rising from the dead is the pledge that we, too, shall rise. This is a great comfort when we bid farewell to our loved ones to death. We shall rise again and the future life will be glorious if we welcome the Saviour into our hearts now. He who has strength to overcome death can deliver us from the power of sin in this present life. Through Christ, we can be conquerors.

"The Power Of The Resurrection"

I Cor. 15:1-8, 20-21, 57-58

Golden Text: "Thanks Be To God, Who Giveth Us The Victory Through Our Lord, Jesus Christ." (In all the miraculous events in the annals of history, by far the most outstanding is the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. Men had brought back to life before as the days of Elisha and during the ministry of Jesus Christ on earth. One man, Lazarus, had been dead four days when he came back at the Saviour's call. But all these endeavored dead again, and succumbed. There Jesus Christ himself was nailed to a cross, and He died, too.

On the third day, the unbelievable happened. Without assistance from the outside world, Jesus Christ arose. He laid aside the death garments and went forth from the tomb. The Roman soldiers, on guard to prevent this lifeless body being stolen by His disciples, themselves became as dead men.

They Knew Him

"I have come on my first husband," said Mrs. Smith, joining my bus-band. "Delighted to meet you, ma'am," I replied the keeper. "What was your husband's name?"

"Joseph Smith,"

"I'm afraid that will not be sufficient for us to identify him. You see, we have quite a lot of Joseph Smiths up here. Are there any other means by which I can identify him?"

"Well, before he died, he told me that if I ever kissed another man, he would turn in his grave."

"Oh! I know the chap. Up here we call him Whirling Joe!"

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

Without Colic!—And You'll Sleep Out of Bed in the Morning! Rain!

The liver should pour out about 2 pints of bile into your digestive tract every day. If it does not, you will feel tired, nervous, and sluggish. You will have indigestion, flatulence, and constipation. You will have a yellowish tint to your skin. You will have a bitter taste in your mouth. You will have a general feeling of weakness and depression.

Take 10 to 15 grains of MAGIC BAKING POWDER three or four times a day. It will stimulate the liver to produce bile and keep it flowing freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills at any drug store.

Checkmate? Means The King Is Dead

The first chess champion of the world was a Spaniard, Ray Lopez, who was awarded the title about the middle of the sixteenth century.

Chess is a very ancient game which is believed to have started in India about three thousand years ago. It is a game of strategy and tactics. The pieces are moved around on a board to capture the king of the enemy.

The game is played on a board with 64 squares. The pieces are the king, queen, rook, bishop, knight, and pawn. The king is the most important piece, and if he is captured, the game is over.

There are many different chess sets and boards. Some are made of wood, some of plastic, and some of metal. The board is usually 8 squares by 8 squares.

The game is played by two people. Each player has 16 pieces. The pieces are moved around on the board to capture the king of the enemy.

A GREAT NEW SERIAL

Riders for the Hoot-Owl Pool

by G. H. SHARP

Packed with action and thrills—A colorful, swift-moving serial bound to please lovers of Western fiction at its best.

No Co-operation

Discussing his tennis technique, a stout, amiable, bald man paraded a court. "My brain immediately barks out a command to my body. 'Run forward, but fast!'" he says. "Start right now! Drop the ball gracefully over the net and ten walk back slowly!"

"And then what happens?" he was asked.

"And then," replied the stout man, "my body says, 'Who—me?'"

Warning note from newspaper. To avoid confusion, possibly painful, it should be explained that "pickle blends" in the furniture or business means a kind of finish—not what you think.

Thought Readings On The Air

Some of the most successful BBC broadcast in years are concerned with thought reading. Something so silent and intangible appears to be made an effective broadcast but two young Australians, Sydney Piddington and his wife Lesley, have been front page news in the British press whenever their "thought transference" programme has been on the air. It mystifies a large section of the listening public but whether it is genuine or a very clever trick is a problem which the Piddingtons themselves do nothing to solve. "Listeners must decide for themselves," is their answer.

Lesley's apparent ability to read her husband's mind is uncanny. In their first broadcasts they were in the same studio and she was blindfolded but was able to identify with ease such things as cards her husband picked out of a pack. In later broadcasts she was in another studio, another building or another town, and she was able to identify with ease such things as cards her husband picked out of a pack. In later broadcasts she was in another studio, another building or another town, and she was able to identify with ease such things as cards her husband picked out of a pack.

How The Moon Fools The Eye.....

One of the most baffling and as yet unsolved problems that scientists are now trying to explain is the apparent alteration in the size of the moon as it rises and crosses the night sky. They know quite well that the moon is practically the same size when it first appears as it is when directly overhead. They also know that the shrinking in size is an optical illusion, but exactly how that illusion is caused remains a mystery.

Everyone knows that the moon on the horizon looks about three times the size of the moon overhead, but though the moon can fool our eyes it can't fool the camera, and a film of the moon rising shows it to be practically the same size all the time it is visible.

Actually, when the moon is overhead it should look bigger than when it is on the horizon because it is about four thousand miles nearer to us.

But when we check this with our own eyes we find just the opposite. Astronomers have been trying to explain this illusion for centuries. Some thought the horizon moon seemed larger because we compare it with trees and buildings also in the line of sight, whereas when it is high in the sky no such comparison can be made.

Others said that dust particles in the air distort the horizon moon and make it appear larger. But ask any sailor what he thinks of this explanation and he will give the lie to it, for at sea the moon illusion seems to be just as great even though there are no trees or dust on the horizon.

Astronomers have discovered that the size of a big harvest moon can be brought down to normal by looking at it through a tube or circle made by one's thumb and forefinger. The same thing happens if you bend down and look at the moon through your legs.

Similarly if one eye is covered and the observer looks at the rising moon on his back, in that position his eyes are in the same position as when he stands erect looking at the horizon moon.

What is the solution to the riddle? Scientists will not commit themselves beyond saying that it has something to do with the raising and lowering of the eyes.

Perhaps you have some ingenious ideas on the subject.

QUICK SAUSAGE SCRAPPLE

Method—Cook bulk pork sausage until done and pour off the grease. Make cornmeal mush, and when smooth add the cooked bulk sausage which has been run through a fine grinder. Cook mush-sausage mixture in double boiler 45 minutes to 1 hour. Pour into greased bread (loaf) pan and chill thoroughly in cool place. When ready to use, slice about 1/4 inch thick, dip each slice into flour and brown in skillet in bacon fat. Serve with syrup.

BEETS IN ORANGE SAUCE

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 cups water
1 1/2 teaspoons grated orange rind
3/4 cup orange juice
3/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar

Method—Melt butter, stir in orange rind, orange juice, salt, pepper, and sugar. Cook until smooth, stirring constantly. Add beets and heat. 8 servings.

Cold River Will Warm Concert Hall

An ingenious system of pipes and pumps will be used to extract natural warmth from the river Thames and provide free heat for the $800,000 concert hall now being built near Waterloo Bridge for the 1951 Festival of Britain Exhibition.

After extracting the heat from the apparently cold Thames, scientists will generate high temperature steam with the others at the famous Eskimo jumping game.

The Thames water will be pumped by two aircraft engines, running on coal gas, to produce cooling a refrigerant liquid. As the warmth in the river water passes to the liquid it will be transformed into a vapor.

This vapor will be compressed in a pump. Its temperature will be tremendously increased in the same way as heat is generated in a bicycle pump.

What No Feathers?—One of nature's oddities is this strange creature caught by coon dogs near Mount Enterprise. The animal's head resembles that of a fox, and it has a tail like an opossum and feet like a raccoon. Stranger yet is the complete absence of hair and an extra tail starting to grow on its back. Charles Hudson, shown holding the animal above, was unable to get a photograph.

The Famous Eskimo Jumping Game

As the darkest part of night came on the crowd of everybody who happens to live where the Eskimo are available all the year round. But when you have to depend on what you have carried or stored away, around this time of year they're liable to be a bit uninteresting, unless you find new ways to "pep them up." Next time you think of serving beets, try them.

BEETS IN ORANGE SAUCE
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 cups water
1 1/2 teaspoons grated orange rind
3/4 cup orange juice
3/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar

Method—Melt butter, stir in orange rind, orange juice, salt, pepper, and sugar. Cook until smooth, stirring constantly. Add beets and heat. 8 servings.

Here, too, is a style you may never have tried for serving that other standby, carrots.

SOUR-SWEET CARROTS
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
3/4 teaspoon salt
Pepper
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 cup hot water
4 cups cooked carrots

Method—Brown butter, blend in flour, and continue browning, stirring constantly. Add seasonings. Combine sugar, vinegar, and water and add to first mixture gradually; cook slowly until thickened, stirring constantly. Pour over hot carrots, 6 to 8 servings.
