Statistics are the darndest things. Ben Spence, who notes in the paper, was quoted by the Liquor License Board a couple of days ago. In the article he was noticed as consuming much less liquor now than they were in 1939 (but he was paying three times as much for what they do drink). That much for what they do drink. That much for what they do drink. That much for what they do drink.

They say... have nice lives but we have never heard that saying attributed to Goldfish. When the family came down for breakfast the other morning Gerald (that's the larger of our two goldfish) was missing from the bowl. All members of the family had peered intently into the bowl it was agreed that Gerald was missing. It was at this point that the young man in the family apied Gerald lying motionless on the floor. In one of his mad asah-ays he had apparently cleared the rim and had completely out of his element. Amid expressions of regret Gerald was deposited in the wash basin until plans could be made for a decent interment. When they were completed and we trouped in to wrap the body in a shroud Gerald's tail was flipping frantically in the little puddle in the bottom of the wash basin. With hopes revived he was replaced in his own bowl and to and behold if he didn't revive completely when he saw Geraldine (that's his wife). He rased away a couple of days later but we think that was due to domestic discord.

Bob Dossar and Gord Hazlett, two of my fellow members of the School Board, think we stay in bed too late in the mornings. Sitting writing columns of copy for the paper at the moment, we are reflecting on their rationalization. (That word can be found in any standard dictionary). As we sit here pondering what we might say about "Pluto" this week everything is still and quiet—so quiet in fact it is almost driving us nuts. The only thing left in the radio is one of those all night dice jockeys and we have the alternative of being driven nuts quietly or by listening to the radio.

Please God! Not to Mine!

Not to mine, this horrible cripper.
 Not to mine this thing with the long scientific name, poliomyelitis, this thing that means misery and pain in the language of the little ones.
 Not to mine to wear a brace, to hobble, to limp.
 Not to mine to hear the laughter of others, to watch them at play, to cry the bitter tears of childhood lost forever.

Please God! Not to mine!
 And let me help those to whom it does come, this cripper, this destroyer.
 Let me give to help the helpless.
 Let my dollars and my prayers go with these little ones, that some day, some time, children everywhere will walk without fear, free of childhood's greatest enemy, Poliomyelitis.

I am glad I have the privilege of giving to the Canadian March of Dimes.

WORKING with and for YOU

The courage to accomplish is a powerful asset in banking, as in other enterprises.
 In the front line of that sweep of land settlement East and West—over the prospector's trails into the mineral regions—in new lumbering districts—this Bank's representatives developed a nation-wide and unexcelled service.
 A proud record? Perhaps so, but of practical benefit to ourselves and to the public has been the close association with enterprising people of all classes, winning their way to better things.
 And so, this Bank joins forces with every man who seeks to improve his position in life, for it has gained much in helping people in the past, no matter how limited their resources.
