

KEEP THEM THERE—that's the advice handed out to flock-owners by Middle Western poultry specialists. By October 15th, these experts say, it is desirable to have They have records which convince them, at least, that confinement of supply enough feed as the pullets rapidly increase in production in the fall. This may result in a premature molt or a slump in production.

Another poultry specialist, points out that heavily eating pullets need ers. When the grain and mash system is used, at least 30 to 36 necessary for 100 layers.

to provide at least one running foot f feeder space to each three hens kept full of fresh mash at all times. Good Way to Stop "Blowouts"

Eversion of the oviduct, or prolapsus, often leads to cannibalism. This usually occurs when a flock approaches the peak of heavy production in the fall, and at the time when the pens are full of layers Quite often the poultry raiser goes morning and finds one or two hens with their vents completely picked

No one knows for sure just what causes this condition. Often the birds can be caught soon enough that they can be washed off with warm water and carefully replaced. Then, if the bird is kept isolated a few days, it will recover. Howin time to be given a treatment of

The best protection is to attach at the time they are housed or to debeak them. Either method will control the trouble.

Most poultrymen like to debeak, as it takes less time. The upper beak is cut back about one-third of the way from the tip to the nostril. There are very economical debeakers on the market, or quite often hatcherymen have them available for loan to their customers.

How to Avoid Fall Slumps Early-housed pullets often have tendency to go into a slump in the late fall. But flock-owners who are on guard against such a developbrough the fall months without

One of the first signs of trouble is loss of weight. Pullets should continue to grow and add weight turity up to 12 months of age.

In a small flock, a good way to keep check on the birds' body weight is to mark about 10 per cent of the pullets with some type of paint so that they can be seen easily. Once a month, these birds

. . . If a weight loss is noticed, efforts should be made to increase feed consumption. This can often be done by increasing the feeding of grain in the afternoon or by feeding of pellets at noon when the birds are accustomed to nothing but

Where Floor Space Really Paid As housing costs increase, we find a growing tendency to crowd the birds. You've heard before that crowding doesn't pay, but here is further proof from records of a big Demonstration Flock. . . .

Records were kept on 14 flocks with an average of 31/2 square feet of floor space per bird, as compared with 24 flocks getting an average of only 21/2 square feet. The uncrowded birds laid an average of 223 eggs, produced $2.23 profoot of floor area. Only 26 per cent were lost.

By contrast, the crowded birds averaged 197 eggs, produced only $1.41 profit, and made 57 cents per quare foot of available space. Thirty-one per cent of them died.

New Remedy For Blackhead Definitely the best drug developed so far for the prevention and control of blackhead is Enheptin T and Antihep, now being mar keted in feeds. This yellow-powdered drug (sold as a 20 per cent mix by feed manufacturers) helps cut heavy losses, once birds get this disease. In recent years blackhead has appeared in flocks more frequently than ever before.

* * * Tests at the Cornell University Veterinary College and at other experiment stations, however, show that the remedy-used for chickens and turkeys-is not 100-per cent effective and should be used along with a good sanitary program. The Cornell experiments under Dr. E. N. Moore also indicated that the drug didn't affect growth very much, and definitely didn't stimulate it. However, he reports that there was no detrimental effect on egg production or fertility.

Deep Litter Trick

A good way to achieve success with deep litter for laying flocks is reported by Miss Dorothy Stabe. She had a chance to compare two ing deep litter, both in the same house. Although there was only a wire netting partition between the two pens, the litter that was started about September 1 remained dry all winter, while litter in the pen started in late October was wet and had to be changed every week or so. Oat hulls were used in both cases.

Miss Stabe wonders if it isn't important to get enough moisture the litter during warm weather which, because of the added heat it provides, keeps the litter dry.

Use Care When Buying A Lamp

Choosing a floor lamp or table lamp is not a job which should be approached lightly, say home advisers. Any lamp that will be used for reading, studying, sewing, or other close work needs to be as that proverbial strong country constructed to give plenty of clear, glareless light. For a good buy in such a lamp, here are features for which to look: 1. Size. Be sure the lamp is tall enough and has a shade broad enough at the bottom to spread a wide circle of light and allow for sitting up comfortably while read-

2. Bowl. Be sure the lamp has a diffusing (reflector) bowl under the shade to prevent glare and soften light. The bowl should be of good quality plastic or white diffusing glass of even thickness throughout. 3. Bulbs. Lamps equipped for three light bulbs are most useful because the light can be adjusted lo suit different needs.

4. Shade. Select shades broad at the bottom, deep enough to conceal the diffusing bowl and with a white lining to reflect light. A white or ivory shade gives about 50 per cent more light than a dark shade which absorbs and thus wastes light.

For more years than we would be likely to admit, except upon the witness stand we have been attempting to call-in advance of the season-the eventual pennant winners in the National and American Baseball Leagues. Naturally, on rare occasions, we have surprised the customers and ourself, by picking one of the two, ("Even a blind hog is liable to pick up ONE acorn," as the eminent horse expert Tom Bird sourly remarked one afternoon when the long shot we had bet on nosed out his three-to-five

A single winner - yes, even though rarely. But two of them, in the same season? Well, up to the start of this year's race, the closest we had ever come to that was when, 1949, we chose the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Boston Red Sox, only to see the latter knocked off in

So now, if you'll pardon us for scavenging around among the dry bones of history, we're going to take the liberty of quoting from our column which appeared here last

In the American League our sentimental choice would be either the Philadelphia Athletics or the Detroit Tigers; and when we first began peering into our much battered crystal ball, it appeared as though the latter must get the call. But the more we studied the respective strengths of the respec-tive clubs, the more it looked as once again, for the Boston Red * * *

On paper they looked invincible. in spite of the sneaking feeling that some of their key men show a slight tendency to choke up when the chips are down and the going tough. In fact if they should happen to get away to a good start—something they have failed to do in the past seasons- they, might win the Junior League by as far boy can throw the proverbial red apple.

Yes, as we said before, we had definitely decided on Mr. McCarthy's Red Sox. And then-and then —we happened to read about some thing which kicked our carefully compounded dope every whichway, and then some.

> These doings concerned a gentle-man of the name of Joseph Di-Maggio, who will be 36 years of Maggio, who will be so years of old age come November—which is plenty of age to be carrying on one's shoulders in big league circles. In addition, Mr. DiMaggio has been so troubled with aching gams that it was uncertain that he would even get to the barrier in this season's race. So here are just a couple of things which that poor over-aged cripple did in his first Yankee . Stadium .appearance—an Exhibition game with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

and, needless to report, the reception which accompanied his leisureleast equal to the one he got for his incredible catch."

Well, when we read those lines -and we only wish we had been there instead of trying to find excuses for not starting to do a little gardening—we smashed the crystal ball, chucked out the tealeaves, and started over. We know that the New York Yankees don't figure to beat the Boston Red Sox. We know that they pulled a miracle last season, and that miracles, like lightning, seldom strike twice in he same place. Still-they're our dealt with the American League prospects away last April; and you just a week or so ago, and with Mr. DiMaggio furnishing a lot of the motive power-those Yankees slid into the first slot... However, even then we weren't worried much about our record because here is how-in the column already quoted from-we had shrugged off the National League prospects.

What about the National League, you say? Well,, if the Brooklyn Dodgers don't win by at least ten to fifteen games, there just in't any justice. They should outclass all the others by so much that the race might be all over by July the Fourth. Philadelphia Phils might be second, and St. Louis Cardinals third. But the Dodgers appear to be the biggest cinch to appear in sports since the days of Man O'War. He was the horse, you might remember, who once appeared to be home free, and finished second to a thing called Upset.

But all's well that ends well, as somebody probably already remark-ed. Just when everything looked blackest Messrs. Ashburn and Sisler came to our aid. Even if only by the merest of thread our unbroken string is still intact; and our many clients who make a habit of taking our selections and then betting against them, didn't lose their your daughter's disarranged, catch-all closet into neat, well-ordered storage space, here's a tip that may turn the trick. with a few yards of cotton fabric and a few hours at your sewing machine, you can make enough glamorous closet accessories to turn the most harum-scarum teen-ager into the soul of tidiness. If this is your first home-decorating assignment, your local sewing center will give you sewing tips.

There are two major reasons for unkempt closets: unattractiveness and lack of organization. If your daughter's present closet is drab and dark, it's no wonder she feels no compunction to keep it prettied up.

Remedy this by painting the inside of the closet a cheerful color that will harmonize with the walls of the room and with the accessory fabric you have chosen. Install an electric light in the closet, too, to eliminate groping in the dark.

Then set about making closet accessories that will encourage your daughter to have "a place for everything, and everything in place."

For these accessories, which should include shoulder covers, garment bags, shoe bags and hat boxes, use a washable cotton fabric in gay print or plaid. It's a good idea to make certain the material is sanforized, to avoid the bugaboo of shrinkage.

material is sanforized, to avoid the bugaboo of shrinkage.

Shoulder covers should be shaped to fit the clothes hangers. Length should be from six to 10 inches; width depends upon the bulk of the garment to be covered.

Garment bags for best dresses are handy and attractive storage compartments. They are made in the same way as shoulder covers, but are full length of dress or coat. When seaming front and back pieces together, leave one side open for snaps or a slide fastener. For those cherished gold or silver silppers, make individual shoe bags. Cut the fabric large enough to allow for a drawstring top; the bag can then hang neatly from its strings on a clothes hook at the back of the closet. Dark tissue paper, wrapped around the shoes before they are put in the bag, will help protect them from tarnish.

To keep the closet floor uncluttered, make a shoe bag for the inside of the door. This should include a back section 18 inches wide, and enough fabric strips, reinforced with cardboard or buckram, sewed on at intervals, to form pouches for four to six pairs A covered hat box is next on the list. Make a paper pattern by tracing the box. Add a half-inch all around for seam allowance.

THE END TESUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. R. BARCLAY WARREN B.A., B.D. Using the Bible

Ps. 19:7-11; Acts 8:26-35 Golden Text: Thy word have I hid in mine heart that I might not sin against Thee.

While visiting a hospital the other day, my young friend happily showed me a Bible which the Gideons had placed in his room. The Gideons are performing a very effective service in placing the Bible in hospitals, hotels, prisons, etc. A great number have come to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ through reading a Gideon Bible. The Bible is still the world's best seller. It is the message man needs today. The youth who are reading
