It doesn't seem possible we are several hundred miles, a lot of beautiful scenery and a boat with the way from the last P.S.P. column we did. It is a fact nevertheless.

The several hundred miles took us across the New England States to the Province of New Brunswick where the scenic St. John River winds its way northwesterly to the tip of the Province, then down the St. Lawrence to the cities of Quebec and Montreal, up the Ottawa to the Capital City and then homeward. The trip was planned for us by The Imperial Oil Touring service and from our book the routing was perfect.

The scenery over the entire route was excellent and in some instances defied description. The finger lakes and Adirondack mountains, the rugged beauty of the coastline, the peaceful homes in the river valleys and the evidence of productive nature confirmed the belief that this is a pretty wonderful country to live in.

It did not, however, confirm the belief that central continent dwellers can easily accustom themselves to the eating habits of the coast residents. Lobsters, clams, scallops and oysters are among the main items in the diet of those living near the sea. We wouldn't recommend any of them to inlanders who generally survive on soft boiled eggs and bread and milk. Down there they attack the vicious looking lobsters like the South Koreans are going after their northern neighbors and smack their lips with relish — and we didn't see any of them with a greenish look around their ears — amazing.

After devouring nature in its finest form for several days we ended up by taking in the closing session of Parliament at Ottawa. As we listened to the debate across the floor of the House we couldn't help but recall the recent observation of that thirty-five million man made laws have been made and there are still no improvements on the ten commandments. Nevertheless it gave one a good feeling to see the elected representatives of the citizens of Canada democratically determining the course we should take to preserve the fundamental rights of free citizens.

We fully expect the finger would be coming home primed right to the tip of our noggin with material and ideas to make this column worth reading for some time to come. But what happens? We're laid low by some kind of a bug that has made life anything but worth living these past few days. Oh well, by the looks of these pills something is bound to happen. See you next week — we hope.
