nine innings.

Well, then, last year there were exactly 12 — count them, 12 — World's Championship fights contested. Now, without straining the little grey cells anduly, try to name just half of them. Play fair and don't peek at the last paragraph of this before answering. We perof this before answering. We per-sonally wouldn't have believed there Mr. Lewis certainly said a large mouthful there; and if there were more sports writers like him, and fewer of the hero-worship kind, we wouldn't have such sorry spectacles as fans getting up purses to reimburse athletes who have been fined sion at least seems to have re-ceived that badly-needed shot in old Joe Louis' knockout victory over Lee Savold. The fight drew two or three times as many cash customers as were expected-but part of that may have been due to the fact that the television was confined to certain theatres where people had to pay to see what went on. No sitdodge the barkeep's or waiter's eye when they give you the glance which means, "Pretty near time to buy another round, buddy." At all events Madison Squ Garden was jammed, no matter what the reason. But those who went out of idle curiosity ended up wildly enthusiastic over Louis' performance, and talking to them-selves about a miracle possibly about to be passed—the miracle of a beaten World Champ doing a successful come-back. Dempsey could not do it. Nor could anyone else. Whether or not the Brown Bomber can pull it off remains to be seen sometime in September, when he's due to fight Ezzard Charles. It won't draw a million dollar gate, in all probability. But it will come closer to doing so than any fight attraction in a long time.

Of course, Lee Savold never wa any ball-of-fire. He's almost as old as Louis and has fought nobody of thunderous rights and Louis took them without blinking or retreating. The chances are that he couldn't, because Ezzard the Gizzard is fastbag the ancient Savold is. Yet then was enough shown by the fading champion of yesteryear for glimmers of hope to remain for him and the vast army of his admirers. After all, the blond Savold supposedly is a far better fighter than the Agra-

The finishing blows were in the old Louis tradition. He set up Lee with a right and then exploded a left hook that had every ounce of force he could command. The capacity house was a tribute to Louis, the only real draw left in the beak-busting trade—at least when he hasn't television to chop him down to normal size. If the Jolter were even five years younger there would be no doubt about what he might do to Charles. But there is no getting away from the fact that he is 37 years old. A faster foe may reveal him to be the bubbling old man he has looked to be during most of his comeback.
