Mother's remedies did not come from the patent medicine counter. No. at the first sign of a cough or cold we children had to sit with our feet in a hot mustard foot-bath before going to bed. We were undressed irst and sat with a woollen blanket wrapped around us - this was so we could hop into bed quickly directly we started to perspire. While our extremities were soaking our beds were being made nice and warm either with flatirons or a "stone pig". There was only one stone pig in the house and since it was a privilege

"stone pig" but in case there are others who don't, maybe I had better explain. A stone pig was a sort of hot water bottle, made of creamy color ironstone-ware and the shape of it really did resemble a nice, fat little pig. We used to fill it with boiling water, wrap it up in a flannel jacket-and then, I'm telling you, it kept hot for As soon as we were in bed Mother came along with a bottle warmed by standing the bottle i bed back and front until they were red. Then nice hot pieces of flannel were fastened in some way pleasant. I haven't got over the off to the kitchen. And the way my bread and milk. And the way my mother made bread and milk was out of this world. I have seen other folk make it for childrenjust by putting little squares of broke up a slice of bread, dropped t into cold milk, and then brought the bread and milk to boil together. This made it nice and creamy -with plenty of brown sugar it was delicious.

Small wonder with all this care our colds were generally "sweated" out of us in sort order, helpliquorice pewder! I was the only one who often did not respond too quickly but had a way of dewas then that mother would fall back on her favourite patent cough medicine—Owbridges Lung Tonic. I think I am safe in mentioning this trade name as haven't seen it mentioned for years so I imagine it is now extinct. If Owbridge's didn't work then I was dosed with ipecacuanha wine-a bitter tasting concoction used as an emetic. I recall so well that I ean even remember now to spell it! I also remember Mother having my eldest brother nip my nose to make me swallow the stug. When we reached the convalescent stage Mother gave us something that was called chemia full account of the events culminating in the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. This is the fundamental thesis of the Gospel, namely that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures and rose again the third day. This is the basis on which salvation from sin is preached to all men. In last Sunday's lesson we saw Jesus praying in agony in the garden. Leaving there, He was betrayed by Judas to the Roman soldiers. Peter drew his sword and cut off the ear of the servant of the high priest. Jesus replaced the ear and said to Peter, "Put up again thy sword into its place: for all they that take the sword shall perish by the sword. Thinkest thou that I cannot pray to my Father, and He shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels? But how then shall the scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be?" Matthew 26:52-54. It is a pity that the war mongers of the world do not understand this scripture. Hitler and Missolini understand it now. Elisha found that prayer was much more effective in defense than an arm II Kings 6:18. Then came the mock trial before the church leaders, fol lowed by the civil trial before Pilate and Herod. Pilate, fearing that the people would report his pre misbehaviour (Luke 13:1, John 19:12) to Caesar, uttered the death sentence. Jesus was on the cross from nine the morning to three o'clock in the afternoon. From noon until three o'clock there was a great darkness, At the last He cried, "My God, my God, why has Thou for saken, me?" Jesus, the Son of God. bore our sins alone. On the third day, Jesus arose from the dead. This verified His claim to Deity. Hence He could say before His ascension, "Lo, I am with you always." "He lives, He lives. Christ Jesus lives today with me He walks with me and talks with me Along life's narrow way.

He lives, He lives. Salvation to impart You ask me how I know He lives He lives within my heart." LONG-HEADED

Cooling Panels

Unwanted heat can be removed from a room by cooling panels even if their temperature is at or somewhat lower than that of the room, says Charles S. Leopold, consulting engineer. This is possible because electric lights and sunlight are sources of radiant energy which is converted into heat when it strikes surfaces at temperatures below their own. The cooling panels can therefore by maintained at vent condensation on their surfaces. A large portion of the hea load that must be removed from a building is initially in the form of "Isn't this rather strange?" radiation from either electric lights queried the friend. "You have only or the sun. This radiation has only a small direct effect on heating the air but a large effect on heating "Yes, that was Jack's idea. He says that if we invite only married and also on the performance of people the presents will be all clear | both air-cooling and panelsystems, says Leopold.

happening to his favorite sport the late Mr. Nasmith, inventor of basketball, is probably turning flip-flops in his grave. For basketball is portant than shooting goals your. taking a grand old going-over, from all angles, and some of the well-paid and highly publicized coaches who, just a few months ago were sitting on top of the sport world, are beginning to wish-like the character in McIntyre & Heath's old show THE HAM TREEthat they'd kept "that old job back in the livery stable."

First, of course, there was the series of smelly scandals which proved conclusively that even if basketball was first played in Y.M.C.A.'s, it has managed to escape from any moral and religious influence to a very large degree.

Then there has been a steadily growing mass of criticism about the emphasis placed on size—or rather height—in the modern game. Year by year the average player has stretched nearer and nearer fo the ing team. A writer in a recent issue of COLLIER'S went down the line along this angle in a bitter attack, saying that most of today's basketball stars aren't athletes at all, but rather a bunch of overgrown freaks who belong in a circus side-show tent, along with the fat lady, the pin-headed boy and the two-headed calf.

Now it would seem that—south of the Border at least-the boys are going in for something that is liable to be more productive of empty seats and shrunken gate-receipts than either crookedness or freakishness. They're playing safety-first basketball—slowing the game down to a standstill. And if basketball ever had any real appeal, it lay in the fact that it offered the customers plenty of action, even if a lot of that action seemed fairly meaningless to anyone not a fanatic.

Most hockey followers realize, of course, that there are two distinct brands of that sport - mid-season out even attempting a shot. There -for the fun of it. In the second, they're playing for the dough. The spectators are already there. Their money is in the box-office, and all that counts is winning that game, portant than shooting goals your-

"Control basketball" is what they call this safety-first style of play. In the past few years most teams have played the "stalling" game, but only in the last few minutes when they happened to be in front. But this year-as one well-known sports writer puts it-the pendulum has swung far in the other direction. They play the stalling game from start to finish, if it suits their book, and as for the spectators,-to heck with them.

Minneapolis is one of the real basketball hotbeds. Folks out that way got their first look at control ball on a big scale just before Christmas—and they didn't like it one little bit. In "a somewhat ridiculous game" the Fort Wayne prostretched nearer and nearer to the ceiling, until any intending basketcer who didn't stand at least six by a single point. The final score was 19-18, which must have been fessionals stalled most of the way, pretty tame to tans used to seeing just one player score 25 points or

> At one point in a Big Ten game between Minnesota and Indiana, Sam Miranda of the latter team held the ball for six minutes and thirtyfive seconds. The report says that the fans joined in singing the "Indiana fight song" during the lullsomething akin to the rhythmic hand-clapping or feet-stamping which baseball and hockey magnates hate so much to hear. Six minutes and thirty-five seconds is an awful lot of time, especially when you've paid good money that might have gone for a movie, or a payment on a Television set.

The two instances just noted were by no means the worst. In a recent game between Hamline and St. John's, Hamilne took the opening tip-off and went in for a basket. After that St. John's held the ball for sixteen and a half minutes with-

Seagram Tells the World About Canada

Created and signed by The House of Seagram, this advertisement, with appropriate copy for foreign lands, is appearing in magazines and news-

This advertisement was designed by The House of Seagram to tell the people of other lands about Canada and things exclusively Canadian.

Many people in Latin America, Asia, Europe and other parts of the world are not fully aware of the richness of Canada's natural resources, wild life, scenic beauty and cultural traditions. The more the peoples of other lands know about our country, the greater will be their interest in Canada and Canadian products.

The House of Seagram feels that the horizon of industry does not terminate at the boundary of its plants; it has a broader horizon, a farther view-a view dedicated to the development of Canada's stature in every
