Pen, Scissors and Pastedot

About the only time we get close to a good cry anymore is when someone accuses us openly or otherwise of dishonorable actions or when Royalty visits Canada. We are happy to say, however, we haven't soaked up too many handkerchiefs since the visit of the King and Queen in 1939.

A close-up look at the Queen on that occasion popped our heart somewhere up between our ears and seemingly squeezed the water right out of our eyes. Not having anything to feel and about, we could only assume they were tears of gladness. We have often wondered since that time just why our emotions welled up with such force, but, strangely enough, we felt no sense of shame that the force of gravity let a tear drop off the end of our chin.

Neither were we surprised in discussing that Royal visit on many occasions afterward to find that other people experienced something of the same emotion.

When we stood waiting for three hours to catch a glimpse of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh last Sunday in Hamilton, we wondered if the same emotional experience would develop when the Princess came into view, but came to the conclusion that it would not and passed the thought out of our mind.

Then came the Scarlet coated escort of R.C.M.P. officers on their motor cycles in perfect precision. It was a grand sight but no great emotional disturbance yet. Then came the open car bearing that lovely lady who will someday be our Queen. Even at five miles per hour it was only a fleeting glimpse, but it was enough. If the cavalcade had ever stopped the old fear ducts would have spread wide open just as sure as the world. That's what Royalty does to us and although we do not know what is signified by such a reaction we are sure it is indicative of a quality which is felt by all Canadian citizens—whether they cry or not.

When the procession had passed we enquired of our six-year-old daughter: "What did you think of the Princess?" Her answer was "When do we eat?" Nevertheless we suspect there is a possibility she will someday relate to her grandchildren the story of the glorious reception given to Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh on their visit to Canada away back in 1951 and that she was within fifteen feet of them as they drove down Melrose Avenue in Hamilton.
