The reason given for this phenomenon was that the plane was facing into a headwind moving fasility than the speed of the plane was facing into a headwind moving fasility than the speed of the plane was facing into a headwind moving fasility than the speed of the plane as an attree of fact at the fine of the Sincole incident Otto wrote a thesis of the second their knowledge on the science of aeronautics can have same if they promise to return the papers intact. The third meeting of the Nanticoke Homemaking Club was held on Friday, November 28th at the home of Audrey Vokes.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved and the roll call was answered by all the girls It was decided to call our club the "Nanticoke Cereal Wagon." There were eight girls present.

Our leader, Mrs. Weaver, then demonstrated some notes on the different kinds of flours. All the different kinds of flours. All the different kinds of flours. All the different varieties of wheat. She told us it would be nice for us to go to a mill and see how flour is made. Molly Jackson and Audrey Vokes made some muffins which the girls later judged according to the rules in their member's pamphlets.

The home assignment is to get all the information we can on how flour is made and study it. We are also to make muffins at least once and put the results in our record books. The roll call for the next meeting is "Three things I have learned about flour."

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, November 25 - (CP) - Par liament launched what may be a preelection session with a government announcement of a far-reaching legislative program.

The Speech from the Throne, read

It also carried what some political observers interpreted as a hint of possible tax reductions in the words: "There are signs of a lessening of the danger of an outbreak of war on a global scale."

Observers were quick to recall that last spring Prime Minister St. Laurent told the Commons there could be no tax cuts until the danger of war decreased. The next budget is due in late March or early April months before the anticipated election date. Most believe a general election will be called for next October.
