ANNE HIRST Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: May I add my heartfelt thanks to you for the M.A. I am a widow too. I also set my heart on a man, and lost. He was separated from his wife because his old love came back into his life. She was pretty and smart, a divorcee with a child, and both as fine as God ever put breath into. I set my plans to break it up. To my regret, I did. He had a public position, and I spread ugly tales about her till the whole town talked.

"Day after day I ran after him. Gave him money to keep him interested. Had my hair dyed, too. I'm in my early 50's.

"Finally, I won him. But, was I sitting on top of the world!
He Got Fed Up
"It didn't last, of course. He got fed up, and had himself transferred to another city. I even went to see him; I was dirt under his feet."
"He spent the holidays here. I thought he was coming back to me. Instead, I saw them both. Christmas shopping, with her child. Did he give me the horse-laugh!
"I am an outcast today. None of my family or friends speak to me. How I grieved—and still do! But I have begun praying to God to forgive me and give me another chance to serve Him—instead of trying to serve another woman's lover."

HEARTBROKEN

"You have taken the first step toward peace of mind—confession, and already you are beginning to know humility.
"As you progress, and learn how to pray and exercise your faith, you will find strength to bear the scars of those who cease you. As they cease to see you, they cease to love you again.
"Dr. Harry Milton Taylor has written a new book, "Faith Must Be Healed." He calls it "prescriptions in Christian psychology," an old-fashioned medicine chest for the soul." It stresses the truth that emotional comfort and health is attained through religious good health, and it has both freshness and the feeling of permanence.
"I believe it can restore your spirit, and bring real consolation to a woman of your intelligence and determination. I hope you will find reading and rereading it as helpful as I do. (It's a free-able book.)
"Go back to your church, and practise your faith. You will come through."
For those who have erred, admission of guilt and deep humility, plus faith, are the first steps toward peace. . . Anne Hirst stands by to lend her sympathy and encouragement. Write her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

By Genevieve O. Clarke
One day last week I was at our local bank when an old gentleman came in. He was very frail and walked with difficulty, even with the help of a cane. But there was something about his expression that made me feel he was well content with his lot in life. Gone was the worn and harassed look that had formerly seemed to be a part of him. He came up to me with a smile, took me by the arm, and said: "I've got my pension!"
It was really wonderful to see the old gentleman's satisfaction—and certainly he was entitled to what he received. He was definitely not getting something for nothing, nor when he was over eighty and had had a long and useful life during which time he had done his share toward supporting that successive government by the regular payment of taxes according to his income.
It makes me very happy to think of the number of old people, who, at long last, will enjoy some semblance of independence acceptable to their years. I like to think of the many grannies and grandpas, possibly living with a married son or daughter, who will now have a small income of their own with which to buy little comforts for themselves without feeling they are taking it from John or Mary—however generous John or Mary may happen to be.
Or it may be that mother and dad, with the help of their combined pension, can now retire to the old home which they had been so afraid might have to be given up for no other reason than the lack of funds.
Yes, Canada has certainly taken a big step toward giving old people this pension. What I did hear . . . just another pensioner about years ago in Korea. It was in my mind of some of the people. You know how it is—your catch the tail-end of some dramatic happening in the soap opera world, and then, maybe a week later, you hear part of it again with no progress having been made at all. You naturally say to yourself—"My goodness, hasn't that affair been cleared up yet?" Of course we know everything possible is being done to bring about peace in Korea, but the radio version certainly makes it seem a very long drawn out affair. And then again, when I listen to news other than Korean activities, and hear all the glibly details of murders, fires and accidents, I find myself half expecting the announcer will finish up by saying—"But Life can be beautiful!"
And now would you like to hear something really wonderful? Yesterday I killed two mosquitoes and today I saw and heard a crow. "Can spring be far ahead?"

Very distressing cases among those who are trying to live on a burr-pot pension. As one lady told me: "We just can't do it, much against our will, we have to find ways and means of getting around it."

Well, life has its problems, and sometimes I wonder if we would be less aware of some of the problems without a radio. This weekend we had company again so the radio was turned on very little. A short while ago, with our visitors gone, I tuned in for the news, wondering as I did so what had taken place in the last 36 hours. What did I hear . . . Just another pensioner about years ago in Korea. It was in my mind of some of the people. ### Any Valuable Books On Your Shelves?

A dilapidated book sandwiched between 3,000 others on the shelves of Ripon Cathedral Library has been identified as the work of William Caxton, England's first printer, who lived in the 15th century. The book is estimated to be worth $60,000, and was recognized by a Leeds housewife, Mrs. Jean Morrison.

For the last 450 years priceless copies of books printed by Caxton have been turning up in the most odd places. His "Fifteen Oes," now in the British Museum, lay for centuries buried in the dusty attic of an old country house.

A copy of Caxton's "Indulgence" was found tucked inside another book in Bedford town library. The famous and priceless "Vellum Caxton" was found in a Roman Catholic seminary.

Is there any possibility of finding any more? Undoubtedly. Only one of the number of books printed by Caxton have been discovered. Not a single copy of many of his publications has been found.

We know this because he tells us so in his preface to "The Golden Bookes of Metamorffoses" in which he contended the fables of Ovid, but of which no trace has been found.

There is no known book of his printed in 1486 and 1488, yet it is very unlikely that he ceased printing during these two years.

Nothing has been discovered of the book entitled "The Life of Robert Erle of Oxenford" which he published. A genuine single copy of this would be worth a fortune.

It is essential to be able to distinguish the genuine Caxton from the spurious one. A genuine Caxton, for instance, will have no title-page, as these were unknown till after 1490.

All the text is in Gothic or Old English, and there must be no Roman or italic lettering, though Roman figures may appear. Nor will Caxton be found, instead, Caxton used an oblique stroke.

Caxton helped us a lot by using only six kinds of type: recognizable type until old was pretty well worn out. Hence the print in many of his books is thick and smudged on the white paper; that his courage was not so prone and ready for labour as it had been, and that age was creeping on him slowly and stealthily his body.

TABLE TALKS

by Jane Andrews

LIVER POT ROAST

3 pounds liver (in one piece)
2 tablespoons onion
8 tablespoons melted butter
1/2 cup finely chopped onions
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup paprika
1 cup sour cream
1/2 cup water
Method—Rub flour into the liver and brown in melted dripping. Remove liver to baking dish and add seasonings to fat, then spread them over the liver. To fat remaining in the pan, add salt, paprika, sour cream and water and pour over meat. Cover and bake at 350 degrees F. for one-and-one-half hours or until liver is tender. Serves six.

SOUP CREAM SAUCE WITH MUSHROOMS

1 pound whole fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 cup sour cream
Salt
Pepper
Pinch of tarragon or dill (optional)
Method—Sauté mushrooms in butter or margarine very carefully and gently pulling only a few in those which have browned. When all have been taken out, see that 2 tablespoons of butter remain in the pan. Into this blend the flour and add milk to make a cream sauce. When sufficiently blended, add sour cream and return mushrooms to mixture, adding seasonings to taste. This sauce may be kept in the refrigerator and either plain or with a thin slice of cheese or ham, or it may be used with chicken or seafood.

SOUP CREAM FISH LOAF

3 cups cornflakes
1 1/2 cups milk
2 cups flaked, cooked fish
1/2 cup sour cream
1/2 cup sugar
1/3 cup butter
Few grains nutmeg
1 1/2 tablespoons flour
1 egg yolk
Method—Combine ingredients, except egg yolk, in top of double boiler. Stir and cook until mixture thickens, then cover and cook ten minutes longer. Add egg yolk and stir and cook two minutes.

—AND GOD BE WITH YOU, MY DAUGHTER

One proof of its age—providing it is not a copy—is the curious tract right at the end of the book in which the printer usually subdues his heart to reader and tells him what difficulties and privations he had to go through in order to print that book.

At the end of Caxton's "The History of Troy," for instance, he tells us that his eyes are "dimmed with overmuch looking on the white paper; that his courage was not so prone and ready for labour as it had been, and that age was creeping on him slowly and stealthily his body."

Why Not Join Us?

Led off by the venerable Benjamin Franklin right at the beginning of the United States, a long list of Americans have invited Canadians to throw in their lot with Uncle Sam. The most recent came from a congressman from Chicago, U.S. House member Charles W. Keating.

Common courtesy demands that we should return the compliment and ask Americans to join Canada. There are good reasons why they should accept.

We have had recent experience in enlarging our country. Newfoundland and Labrador, the most recent province—but that is something which could be ironed out later.

We have the raw materials. The U.S. could supply the factories, people and markets to support them. We have billions of acres of land which we might as well have and use.

We have sound governments, and they are always waiting to take on more and more duties. To run

Subtle Changes Mark Parisian New Fashions For Spring

Paris—A narrow line and a disciplined fulness appear to mark the new Spring silhouette from French designers. Translated into U.S. terms, any woman can apply to her own wardrobe and her coming purchases, this means there's a dramatic change in fashion—subtly and subtle changes that do make a difference in the general picture.

With some houses, skirts are longer. With others, the length is static. Sleeves are focal points of interest and their treatments are many.

In color, the beige, yellows and grays are all important and in fabrics, the harsh wools, supple silks and subtle prints take top honors. Generally, to sum it up, "Day clothes will be fashioned of less yardage" is the newspaper Le Figaro comments.

SOUP CREAM CAKE FILLING

1/2 cup sour cream
1/3 cup sugar
Few grains nutmeg
1 1/2 tablespoons flour
1 egg yolk
Method—Combine ingredients, except egg yolk, in top of double boiler. Stir and cook until mixture thickens, then cover and cook ten minutes longer. Add egg yolk and stir and cook two minutes.

SOUP CREAM ROLLS

1 yeast cake
1/2 cup lukewarm water
2 cups sour light cream
1 1/2 cups sugar
2 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon soda
About 5 cups all-purpose flour.
Method—Soften yeast in warm water. Scald cream in the top of a double boiler, add sugar, salt and soda and cool to lukewarm. Add dissolved yeast and half the flour, beating to make a smooth batter. Add remaining flour to make a soft dough. Turn onto a lightly floured board and knead until satiny and smooth. Shape into small loaves and place in a greased baking pan. Brush lightly with melted butter. Cover with a clean towel and let rise in a warm place until double in bulk—one-and-one-half to two hours. Bake at 425 degrees F., 15-20 minutes.

Peek At The Future—Looking something like Alice in the Wonderland rabbit's house, a bright-eyed youngster peers into a model living room designed by boys and girls of a settlement house. The model was one of several presented by the youngsters to the York Housing Authority as their ideas for the rooms they would like to see built in Burroughs House, a new housing project in the city.

Ordered Cloaks But Got Clocks Instead

By 1886, men and women on both sides of the Boundary were under British hands, they might be willing to trade their country as part payment for U.S. debts incurred toward Britain before the Revolutionary War. These debts were paid in 1776. Incidentally, if the Americans became Canadians they could really claim to have won the War of 1812 and to have been in both worlds from the very beginning.

Ottawa would remain the capital, somewhere in the South, some small spot like Vero Beach, Florida. Washington D.C. is not warm enough and hasn't any good beaches. The empty buildings there could be used for over-crowded Ottawa departments.

Canada has additional political advantages. The climate already gives a lot of people a deep-freeze every winter, and we have lots of native-grown milk.

By our own admission this is our century, so the Americans had better get on our hand-guns. From The Financial Post.

Playing Cards Keep Their Fascination

In spite of the rival claims of television, radio, the movie without other entertainments, the popularity of playing cards remains as never before. Their fascination never lessens.

The pack was originally designed to amuse a royal madam, King Charles VI of France. Playing cards had been known for centuries before Charles' reign (1380 to 1422), but since the king had the mind of a child, a special, simple pack was made up in which were depicted pictures of the people and things Charles talked about.

These included kings, queens and jacks, knaves, swords (now displaced into spades) diamonds, and merchants.

One merchant was named Jacques Coeur and "coeur" in French means heart. Hence the suite named after him.

Cloves were "treffles" or clover leaves, symbol of the medieval French peasant.

Charles insisted that the pack be practically impossible for two exactly similar hands to be dealt. Lieben, an eccentric German, bet that he would succeed in turning a pack of cards in a certain order which was stated in an agreement.

He dealt and redeal for ten hours a day for twenty years, repeating the operation 4,240,028 times, and at last succeeded.

His success was called "trump" and the game was played by four people, each with twelve cards. The remaining four cards lay face downward in the centre of the table.

Step by step during the seventies, the Canadian Valley's social pattern continued to evolve. For their biennial balls, Manitoba's new Government House officials, looking with disfavor upon the women in elaborate evening dress but moaned, "made cold fact the American spin." ### New Fashions For Spring

LANVIN (CASTILLO)
J. FATH
JACQUES GRIFFE
BALMAIN
JEAN DESSES

Spring Stuff—These sketches, from the Paris newspaper, Le Figaro, epitomize the new Spring trends from some of the leading Parisian couturiers.

Beige is Fath's favored color, followed by yellow, green and navy.

BALMAIN launches a narrow silhouette in which greater length of leg is achieved by a cut, as the length of hem remains stationary. The waistline and shoulders are normal and slender.

A feature is sleeves set in "step-wise" at different levels back and front. Bodices are simple and unadorned, with three-quarters sleeves and collars. His fabrics include crepe, tulle, wool, silk, broderies. Colors and neutrals—sand and honey, or bright yellow, blue and white.

GRIFFE
His "flowing" line brings a radical change in the silhouette, traceable to a new treatment of the waistline described by Le Figaro as "mother and fitting." There's a noticeable difference in skirt lengths. Shoulders are inconspicuous, bodices discreet. These gowns give importance by the introduction of the sleeves at the bustline. There's not one long sleeve in the collection. Harsh and supple fabrics share honors, with a definite preference for cotton in the latter category. The anal of
