Specially Written for the Record
— By Harry Eccles —
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Harvesting of this year's excellent crop of sweet corn is general through out southern sections of Ontario, and high yields are expected.

This week's report of the Ontario agriculture department also noted that silo filling is in full swing in most southern sections, and fall wheat seeding is proceeding in those areas that had sufficient rain. Some areas however have had too little rain, such as Wentworth, Durham, Prince Edward and York.

Rains generally have been heavier in eastern Ontario than in the central and southern counties. In Northern Ontario rains are sufficient and the harvest is continuing. Ntpissing district suffered frost near the beginning of September. Potato harvesting has begun in Cochrane North and the yield is expected to be average. Grain in Kenora is of good quality.

BETTER QUEEN BEES

The Ontario Agricultural College is developing a new race of Queen bees in a research project on Pelee Island. A. C. Askew, director of the project, explained at St. Thomas this week that a second year of work has been completed and some 1,200 of the new type queen bee, a hybrid being created by artificial insemination, were produced this year.

One aim is to develop tongues in honey bees to achieve better pollenization of clover blossom for the production of seed. The bees have been sent to Montreal for testing and also across Canada and in the United States.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

Some of our farm organizations should look at themselves in the glass and wonder what they look like to the rest of the world.

While the tomato growers of Essex County, Ontario, are asking for a law to make it illegal for strikers to halt work during the harvesting of perishable crops, the tomato growers of Okanagan Valley, B.C., are deliberately allowing the finest sun-ripened tomatoes to rot on the vines in order to create a scarcity that, they hope, will force higher prices for the ones they choose to sell.

They are doing this under the authority of laws that encourage such practices.

In the eyes of these tomato growers, it is quite all right for them to destroy needed food in order to increase their profits; but it is all wrong for factory workers to destroy the same kind of food in the same manner in order to increase their wages.

The unpleasant fact is that neither the organized tomato growers nor the organized packing house workers have any sense of responsibility towards the general public on whom they both depend for their living. They don't care what happens to the world's food supply so long as their profits are assured.

They are able to do these things only because our laws allow them to get away with it.

Our lawmakers should also look in the glass and ask themselves what they look like to the rest of the world. Whose interests have they been serving and whose have they been betraying in making laws that give organized groups the powers they now hold over the livelihood and the lives of the general public ?

Memories Of Edmund Pugsley

— By Norman C. Colbert —

PART 5

Mr. Pugsley wrote at great length on his life as a teacher at Port Dover, Paris, Port Rowan, Simcoe, etc., but as those portions of his story do not relate to Walpole, this part will end for the present at least, publication of his memories.

RETURN TO SCHOOL

For some reason or other I became restless, and decided to return to high school. To do this I needed an entrance certificate. Hence, although I was twenty-one years old, I attended a village school (Newcooke) three miles distant, walking to school each day. I did this for two years. I was in classes with young children, one of them only eight years old, but for some reason I did not mind.

In the fall of 1883, I entered the high school at Port Dover, ten miles away, and boarded with my good reputed, but a new Principal had been hired, and before long there was a marked improvement. This was due to the new headmaster, and to a few really good students, many of whom came from Walpole Township.

I entered into my work with my whole heart, since at my age I could not afford to remain at school very long. My ignorance of many subjects, especially English, caused some of my fellows to laugh at me, and that may have been a spur. The Principal too, took special pains with me because of my age. To increase interest, he offered a number of prizes that first year, and I determined that if study would aid, I would get my share. I took prizes in the subjects I was ridiculed in. At the end of the year, not only this prize, but one for making the highest aggregate of marks on the second year's teaching examination came to me. I wrote on twenty-one papers, seven on intermediate work, seven on Intermediate, and higher work, and seven on the higher work. The last fourteen papers were the ones concerned, on which I was granted grade A. I made a very good mark in ordinary arithmetic. I think it a crime that arithmetic is so badly neglected at the present time.

I had Latin, but I needed more languages for my profession. So the next year I took German and Greek. It was a mistake to take German instead of French, as I have since found out. At the end of my first year, this took two clear days before the examinations and I went to Toronto for a visit and did not open a book. The examinations was a top scholar. If one has studied hard up to examination time it pays to relax, and come to the examination with a clear head.

In order to keep down expenses, I boarded myself, and with the help of my family, my mother particularly. I hired a room for one dollar a week, and in it I lived, cooking from home food already cooked. Quite often during the winter in the morning the bread was frozen, and even a slice on the loaf would be thawed, toasted and eaten. The food was coarse and plain, but nourishing, and I got along very well for two years.

In those days, quite a number of students had to do their own work, in order to be able to attend school. I do not recommend it to any student, as there is no virtue in it, but sometimes it was the only way. I studied around the clock for hours every night, doing the arithmetic of when I was somewhat tired.

When I first attended high school, I used to get zero in dictation, and when I attempted to explain that naturally I was a poor speller, his reply was that the explanation of the poor spelling was lack of attention. His proof was that I made very few mistakes in Latin. The true explanation of poor spelling or poor writing is carelessness or lack of attention. I owe a great deal to the help, good advice and kindness of Mr. Barron the Principal of the school.

In the fall of 1885, Mr. Pugsley entered Victoria College and life at Victoria College has been omitted).

EXPERIENCE IN FARMING

During the holidays, between my first and second year, I hired out to an uncle to help him on his farm. I was to work four months at eighteen dollars per month and board. I was rather slender in build, but strong, taking after my father. During that summer I weighed about one hundred and thirty pounds, but was healthy and strong. I was in the field by seven o'clock. My uncle did not like walking so I looked after the team, which suited me very well. As I especially liked to plough. During harvest I could keep up with my uncle in binding, which suited everybody. The only complaint I heard was from my aunt. We were drawing peas from a farm about a mile away. I remembered hearing of some cousins who put an acre of peas on one load, so I did the same. It was a tremendous load, sticking out over the horses and away behind the rear upright. Naturally it took me some time to pitch that load off into the mow, and naturally my aunt thought I was a long time doing it, and said so.

I did not lose a day, and at the end of the four months I had seventy-two dollars in cash, enough to pay my expenses for the fall term at college. Our daily routine might be of interest to some. In the field by seven, worked till twelve, when we had dinner and a two hour rest, then work to five, when we had supper. Then back to the field, and work as long as one could see. No eight hour day then.

It was while I was at college that I helped to elect Dr. Montague to the Dominion Parliament. Haldimand County had been a Reform strongbold for many years, being represented by Mr. Thompson in the Federal House, and by Dr. Baxter in the Legislature. One day I received a telegram from my father asking me to come home to vote. He was a Conservative and of course I was.

In those days the word "progressive" was not so prominent as it is today. The word "Tory" was quite expressive, and did not take up a whole line in a letter. Dr. Montague was the Tory candidate, and I was to come home to vote for him, which I did. After a recount, Mr. Montague was declared elected by one vote, which I said was mine. The Doctor was a savvy man and a good speaker, but I was never very proud of the result of my one vote. It was during this time that the Riel rebellion took place, and the execution of Riel was much opposed in Ontario, while in Quebec Sir John MacDonald was both wise and firm.

(Later Mr. Pugsley returned to teach in Port Dover and make a reference to his cousin, the poet Wilson MacDonald).

Wilson MacDonald lived in Port Dover with his grandfather, an uncle of my mother. I can still see the small wistful face of the sensitive boy who tenderly missed his young mother, who was one of my favourite cousins

Lions Hear Highlights of Trip To Alaska

Harry Hewitt, Secretary of the Haldimand Co-operative Co., at Cayuga, described a recent trip to Alaska to the members of the Jarvis Lions Club, on Monday night, which held their close attention for more than an hour.

The trip which extended over a period of thirty-eight days, covered twelve States of the Union and five Provinces of Canada, as well as the Yukon Territory. Travelling was done in a small bus which provided sleeping accommodation for Mr. Hewitt and his five fellow passengers. The bus also had facilities for cooking.

It was a trip that Mr. Hewitt long had a desire to make and the scenery fully justified the 12,000 mile journey to the top of the world. They travelled 179 miles north of Fairbanks, Alaska, which is as far as land vehicles have ever travelled northward in that direction. Of all the places the party visited, Mr. Hewitt was most taken by the area around Chilliwack British Columbia, and said that he felt it would be one of the most ideal places in Canada to retire.

Douglas Mitchell, of Jarvis, was the driver on the tour and piloted the party over the treacherous mountain roads in British Columbia and the trails of Alaska, without so much as putting a scratch on the bus.

The speaker was introduced to the meeting by Lea Marshall and thanks was extended to him by Bryce Linklater.

Would Modify Original Plans Community Hall

In discussing the Community Hall project the chairman of that committee in the Jarvis Lions Club reported on Monday night that some consideration was being given to the advisability of modifying the original plans and proceeding with the foundation this fall. Mr. Marshall pointed out, however, that any modification of the original plans would have to be agreeable to all organizations concerned.

Lion Albert Fond another member of the Lions Club Committee, said "we will soon have to do something or quit talking about it." Lion Fond pointed out that "we will never have a community hall until someone take hold of the project and really does something about it. We can keep on talking about a community hall forever", he said, "but that is not going to make it a reality."

The discussion in the Lions meeting brought about a lengthy meeting of the directors at the conclusion of the meeting which the executive of the organization in session until the midnight hour. No report on their conclusions have been made public.

Fireside Club

The Fireside Club met at the home of Mrs. Alfred Marr on Thursday evening, September 11th for the opening meeting of the season. The President, Mrs. J. Peresky opened the meeting with the Club motto A Thanksgiving Theme for the worship service was very capably given by Mrs. Leonard Church. Mrs. Collins and Miss Marjorie Bamford were appointed to select a play for the Club.

The speaker for the evening was Rev. Dr. Packman, who was introduced to the Club by Mrs. Elvin Pond. Dr. Packman gave an awakening talk on "Killing Time." Mrs. Packman spoke briefly expressing their appreciation for all that had been done to make their stay here enjoyable.

Mrs. E. Braund moved a vote of thanks to Dr. Packman. Mrs K. Parkinson thanked the hostess and committee in charge for the delightful lunch and evening spent. Mrs. Agnew offered her home for the October meeting.

Mother, Family Escape Flames

Port Dover, Sept. 24 - A mother and her two daughters were driven from their home here last night by a flash fire which gutted the two-storey frame dwelling and destroyed most of its contents Port Dover firemen saved a near-by home.

Mrs. Dorothy Marr was upstairs with her two children, Gail, 14, and Betty, 10. On coming downstairs, she heard a cracking sound and found smoke pouring from a small room at the rear of the house.

Mrs Marr's husband, Pte. Lloyd Marr, was killed in action in World War II and is buried in Holland.

The alarm was turned in by Ken Stillwell.

Mrs. Marr and her children, who lost everything in the fire, are now staying with Mrs. Marr's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Avery Bush, Second Avenue.

Want Better Lighting On Main Street

Members of the Jarvis Board of Trade are of the unanimous opinion there should be better street lighting in Jarvis, and particularly in the business section. One member in giving consideration to adding flood lighting from his own premises if something is not done soon to eliminate the dark spots uptown.

The matter of better street lighting has been before the Board of Trade on previous occasions and last Friday night some members showed evidence of becoming slightly exasperated that nothing has been done. Lea Marshall pointed out that the present street lighting was installed about twenty-eight years ago and said that it was seldom found that anyone in business operated the same machine for that length of time without an overhaul or a complete replacement.

Reeve Walker told the meeting that plans were made for rebuilding the hydro system and that he was personally in favour of more modern street lighting in the business section. The plans, he said, called for a start on the work last January but circumstances had caused a delay. He said he hoped to see this work done while he is still in office.

Discuss Means Of Improving Business Relations In Jarvis

Members of the Jarvis Board of Trade took a close look at themselves during discussion at the regular meeting of the organization held at the American Hotel last Friday night.

The subject under discussion was "what can we do to improve and expand business relations in the Village."

The discussion was started off by the Secretary of the Board, James Andrews, who dealt extensively with the matter of customer relationship. He followed John Peresky who talked about the problem of the independent merchant in meeting the chain organizations. Rev. Dr. Arthur Packman, who was earlier welcomed as a guest at the meeting, expressed the view that Jarvis business establishments would, in his opinion, rate high as a business centre. He said he had generally been impressed with the business place in Jarvis and with the courtesy shown by the proprietors and their staffs. He emphasized the point that the "customer is always right" and must be treated accordingly at all times.

The President, N. C. Colbert, suggested the possible advisability of holding feature sales events at regular intervals throughout the year as a means of encouraging mass buying and also as a means of extending the trading territory. The suggestion was hot received with any evidence of enthusiasm.

While nothing tangible arose from the discussion, the members, undoubtedly, gained some valuable ideas from the thoughts expressed by their fellow members.

C.A.S. Appeal For $6,000.

Cayuga - Dates of the annual financial campaign of the Haldimand Children's Aid Society, and the objective for 1952, were set at a regular meeting of the board of directors held at the county court house here. C.A.S. president W. W. Leach, of Dunnville, presided.

The financial campaign, in most sections of the county, will be held during the week of October 20-25, and the objective has been maintained at the same level as last year, despite rising costs - that is, $6,000, for the entire county. Cayuga is an exception to the rule, and here the financial appeal will be part of the Central Haldimand Charities campaign during the week beginning October 6th.

Objectives for each community are as follows: Dunnville $2,700.00; Hagersville $1,000; Caledonia $1,000.; Rainham-North Cayuga (Central Haldimand Charities) $800.; Jarvis $500.

The $6,000. which the Children's Aid Society hopes to obtain from public contributions represents less than one-quarter of the total operating budget, with the balance of the money coming from municipalities who have been declared responsible for the children in the care of the society, or from parents who are making payments toward the care of their children. The total annual budget is now well over $25,000., indicating the size and importance of the society's work.

However, although the public's contribution represents only a fraction of the total budget, this money has a job to do out of all proportion to its size. It is used for certain indispensible services provided throughout the county for which no other source provides funds, some of which are regarded as the keystones of Children's Aid work. These services are duplicated by no other organization.

Public contributions, for instance, finance adoption services - a big job indeed, which the Children's Aid Society is responsible for recommending, investigating and supervising all legal adoptions in the county.

Public contributions allow the society to care for children who are not the legal wards of the parents who are unable to look after them for brief periods due to illness; or for unmarried mothers who are allowed up to two months to make up their minds in the interests of the child.

Public contributions pay for the trained, efficient, and sympathetic help given to unmarried parents. The earlier in the pregnancy that the society is consulted, the greater the help that can be given.

Public contributions pay for the service considered most important by local C.A.S. officials - the protection of children in their own homes. More than half of the funds from the financial appeal are devoted to this work, which is based on the belief that it is infinitely more practical and more economical to make a child's own home satisfactory, than to remove him to a foster home.

The board of directors, at their meeting, heard a report prepared by provincial government inspectors, on the operations of the Haldimand Children's Aid Society for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1952.

The report was highly commendatory, noting improvements in many departments sufficient to "raise the standing of the Society from just within "B" category, to the middle brackets of "B" category." It makes a similar increase in the local society's grading the preceding year, indicating that the board and staff are operating efficiently and effectively.

Former Reeve Says Street is Speedway

The fine new street from the intersection of No. 6 Highway west on No. 3 Highway is a speedway, according to ex-reeve Lea Marshall, and steps should be taken by the authorities to curb this practice.

He recommended pavement signs and the installation of a speed-trap to catch those guilty of driving at excessive speeds through the Village. "Some of these days something disastrous is going to happen if we don't take steps to prevent it now" said Mr. Marshall.

A recommendation to the Council was unanimously passed to take action in this regard.
