ANNE HIRST Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: Fifteen years ago our son married an older girl. She has always been as jealous as she doesn't allow him to visit his family. She has never attended church or let her children go to Sunday school, and those children do not know their grandparents except on their mother's side.

"She seems only to want our son's money. She doesn't care anything for him. She has always gone to his office to collect his check; he has had several good positions, but changed them often because he grew ashamed of her behavior. She watches him so closely that if she doesn't know where he is hour by hour, she calls the police!

"We have helped her in so many ways, and got no thanks for it. . . . She finally wrote me a letter asking us to stay away from her house; we have, and shall continue to. But I am so worried about what will happen to our boy, living under such a strain!

Everyone that knows him loves him.

"Your column is the very first thing I turn to when my paper comes. God bless you in your work! Have you any advice for us?"

A Worried Mother—His Problem

The girl your son married has literally taken him away from his own people. Her hold on him is apparently too overwhelming for him to protest, or he would have had the gumption long ago to assert his independence. "He would see his parents when he pleases," he would take his children to church, collect his own paycheck, and otherwise get the upper hand. What she does is to compel his subservience, you cannot know; but he is surely under her thumb.

His marriage was obviously a mistake. He must have been bewitched by her beauty or her charm, neither of which I expect can move him now. Perhaps he is staying with her only so his children can feel they have a father, however little authority he carries.

All this is heart-breaking to you and your husband. Yet any move you might make to advise him would, through loyalty to his wife, be resisted. You two (like so many other lonely parents) can only stand silently by, grieving.

And praying that one day he will find a way to end his servitude, and once again know the parents he still loves and loves.

I might suggest that your husband try to lunch with his boy now and then. If the lad will consent, that, too, may be a questionable gesture. Ask your husband's opinion, he may have a better idea.

For your own sake and your husband's, try not to dwell too long nor often on your son's troubles. Grieving alone only weakens one's hope and faith. Employ your energies in a wholesome living: Work in your church and your community and be active with your husband in various endeavors. Rebuild your faith through prayer and meditation, strengthen your belief that your son will find the wisdom and courage to better his miserable life.

Was He A Pirate Or A Gentleman?

The revival of the old riddle as to the character of Captain Kidd reveals a common misunderstanding. People ask: Pirate or gent? but seldom think there may be a third alternative.

The real question is: Was he a buccaner? For buccaners were not pirates, though often they behaved as such.

They were mostly sailors who had settled on the Mosquito Coast, had been driven off by the Spanish, and had thus drifted into piracy. Kidd was a citizen of the colony of New York, a successful sailor of good character.

LONDON (IWA)—When the high cost of living, a knock-out suit of armor would weigh 25 pounds, not on a day, and vitamin pills costing what you do.

Your Chances Of Living To Be 100

What are your chances of living to 100? It's not a question of life expectancy, according to some medical authorities.

When you eat, you eat with your heart, wears out, life ends though the other organs may be good for another 25 or 30 years.

Doctors are asking why old people die. It is not because of old people, and why some people are long-lived and others die young.

It is believed by nutritionists that those on good diets live a quarter as long again as those on indifferent ones.

I do not say that diet will prevent old age creeping on, the American Dr. J. S. McLeister has shown that those on good diets live a quarter as long again as those on indifferent ones.

Goal is scored when a player hits the target—an area marked on a tree trunk at one end or a small door at the other—with a "shy" he has earned in the scrimmage.

Goal is scored when a player hits the target—an area marked on a tree trunk at one end or a small door at the other—with a "shy" he has earned in the scrimmage. When a player, despite the interference of many pairs of stout boots but with the assistance of the wall manages to hook up the ball with his foot and "touch" it with his hand he shouts "Got it!" Providing he is in "calls" and providing the umpire agrees with him he has a "shy" at goal. Ten unsuccessful shots at goal, which are extremely difficult, are counted as one successful one.
