

ANNE HIRST Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: Two and a half years ago I married a man 10 years older; I am 28, I am very disturbed. Until lately, my husband was everything I dreamed of — kind, understanding and very considerate. Ever since I married I have worked. Not long ago, he asked me to stop because he needed me at home, so I did. I am a good housekeeper, and do everything in my power to keep him happy.

"Until now, whenever he went anywhere, he asked me to go with him; people are used to seeing us together. Now, because he doesn't run around with the boys, so to speak, he hasn't the money to spend as he used to. Some of them joke with him about having me always along. So he wants me to stay home all the time and us to stop going anywhere together. He seems to feel they don't respect him, nor me either. "I don't understand this. When a wife is out with a man, it should be her husband. What are people trying to do to our lives?"

"When he drinks (which he does sometimes), he tells me these things, and says he thinks his friends are right, because he seldom sees them out with their wives.

"I am so unhappy that sometimes I feel I am not wanted."

I wish you would ask him to read this opinion today. Then he may have a better idea of how to live his own life with his own wife, and let lesser men go their chosen way.

TOY MANUFACTURE IS BIG BUSINESS...

Toy manufacture is no longer a hit-or-miss affair. The Canadian toy industry with an annual output of $30,000,000 employs top designers, colour engineers and consults psychologists and educationalists in the routine in over 300 toy firms across the country. Manufacturers are alert to the fact that playthings must be functional for each stage of a child's development. The retailer, too, must know what is the right toy for the right age.

The Canadian Welfare Council has studied the play needs of children from one month to ten years. To the proud father who would buy a $10 life-size car, the council warns that a two-year-old will be more impressed with a plastic toy car than a real one. At five you have before you a real little person. The psychologist claims it is a mistake to treat him as an inferior. Let him have realistic toys, cut-out maps, a scooter or a workbench.

At school age, from six to eight, children have boundless energy and a passion for learning new skills. This is the time for a bicycle, roller skates or a kite. At nine to ten, the child is beginning to concentrate. They are ready for a model airplane, a model car, a model train, a model boat, a model house, a model farm, a model city, a model country, a model world.

Weight Of All Flesh—A current weight-losing craze has women of Europe-East and West alike—watching their pounds. While the women lose weight, they hope, there's a man who gains from the fat. He's the one with the scales who goes to the market and weighs all the one who will to reduce. Scene above in Yugoslavia.

At this time of the year there is only rolling land and the bush beyond but looking at it one can easily imagine what it had been in the fall and what it will be in the spring. And Adams the Detroit Red Wings, these fellows never seem to require any red ink. And a cash-register to Jean Beliveau, the Canadian rookie...

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN by Elmer Ferguson

"There must be a better way to make a living," complained Santa Claus as he served his last round-up of clients for the 1933 Xmas season. "Between the high cost of living, shortages and strikes I can't get the boys and girls what they're looking for. Why, some of the National Hockey League clubs have been writing in, asking me to provide them with a winter. One can't do that," he added regretfully.

"What we wanted to know," is the most important short-cut. "I'd say common sense," retorted Santa, tugging at his beard, rather irritably. "The things they ask for! For instance, I have a bear-stained request from Chicago, asking me to provide that city with another Stanley Cup team. I can't do that. Those Black Hawks will have to look after themselves."

"I'm sending a gallon of black ink each to Cooney Smythe of the Leafs, Frank Selke of the Montreal Forum and Jack Adams of the Detroit Red Wings. These fellows never seem to require any red ink. And a cash-register to Jean Beliveau, the Canadian rookie..."

Insurance company statistics tell us that in an earlier age than women, which proves that they were; and otherwise the ladies would be going first.
