

CELEBRATE ON SATURDAY, AT
JARVIS, May 23
— 10.30 A.M. BALL GAMES START —
1. P.M. - CALITHUMPAN PARADE
Led by the HAGERSVILLE CITIZENS BAND
GAMES - PONY RIDE
7.45 P.M. - AMATEUR SHOW
8.30 P.M. - FINAL B
9.00 P.M. - ANI
9.30 P.M. - FIRM
• ADMISSION
AFTERNOON — 25c
Cars Parked on Ground
— Children 12 Years and 1

Pen, Scissors and Pastepot

WRATH IS INVOKED—
When the weather fails to co-operate for the Victoria Day Celebration, the boys and girls of the Jarvis Lions Club are not only disappointed but also annoyed. The club is now planning a party at the home of the club on Saturday afternoon, May 23, at 2 o'clock. The party will be a "Pen, Scissors and Pastepot" party. The boys will be invited to bring a letter to the club and the girls to bring a card. The party will be a very enjoyable one and all are invited to attend.

of our opinion that the show must be 60 per cent of people now living called off but no one there were involved. Such was not the case with the President of the Lions Club. When his son and heir heard him announce the celebration would not take place he informed his father if he persisted in that decision he would get the Government after him!

AVERAGES
The speaker was in the educational province of the United Nations organization. He was telling of the difficulties of the globe to understand their neighbours. "How can they," he asked, "when they are so far away?"

News of the Countryside
From The Record's Correspondents

RENTON
Mrs. Johnson Hewitt of Renton, who has been in the hospital for some time, is now home and is recovering from her illness.

At The Churches
ANGELAN CHURCH
Rev. R. Richardson, incumbent, presided at the service.

Coronation Supplement

Prince Philip
The Man At The Queen's Side
A Capable, Popular Consort

Britons To See Religious Play In Abbey

Westminster Abbey, for the first time in a long while, will be the scene of a religious play shortly after the coronation. The play, "The Coronation," will be written by the poet, John Masefield. It will be performed by the choir of the abbey.

Composer Sir W. Walton Writes Coronation March

Orb and Sceptre is the title of the coronation march which the Arts Council of Great Britain has commissioned from the composer, Sir William Walton, in honour of the coronation. The march will be played at the first time on coronation day, June 2, in the program of the coronation ceremony.

Acorns From Royal Oak

In connection with the coronation, a novel scheme has been devised to collect acorns from the Royal Oak at Windsor. The acorns will be used to make a special coronation cake.

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II

The spirit of coronation joy is reflected in the new coronation robes for the Queen. The robes are made of silk and satin and are of a rich red color. They will be worn by the Queen at the coronation ceremony.

The Queen's Busy Day

By any computation the present Queen is one of the busiest women in the world. It could be said that all lines of communication in the Empire covering nearly a quarter of the world's land surface are centered on a point known as Buckingham Palace. This makes her the head of the government in the United Kingdom, Wales, and Scotland, head of the judiciary in England and the sole representative of the nation in international affairs.

One Of The World's Busiest People In Role Of Monarch, Wife, Mother

By any computation the present Queen is one of the busiest women in the world. It could be said that all lines of communication in the Empire covering nearly a quarter of the world's land surface are centered on a point known as Buckingham Palace. This makes her the head of the government in the United Kingdom, Wales, and Scotland, head of the judiciary in England and the sole representative of the nation in international affairs.

DANCE -

Sponsored by the Jarvis Lions Club in the Jarvis Arena
JARVIS ARENA
EVERY FRIDAY NIGHT
Dancing 8.30 to 1.30
Featuring the music of
ALEC GALLAGHER
THE CLUBMEN
LIONEL STUBBS

Stan Mitchell says

"A smile costs nothing but buys everything"

Impressive Procession 'Ere

Coronation Of Queen Victoria

Wonderful Pageant

The procession from Buckingham Palace started at 10 a.m. and was an impressive sight. Ambassadors and ministers, the royal carriages, more bands, the Yeomen of the Guard, officers and officials, cavalry—and the Queen in her state carriage, drawn by eight cream-colored horses. The procession was led by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Many Responsibilities

It is a fair assumption that when Queen Elizabeth II is crowned on June 2 this year, the ceremony in all its intricate detail will run without the unfortunate hitches which marked the coronation of her great-grandmother Queen Victoria.

Recognize Tradition

On coronation occasions it is noted that the Duke walks behind the Queen. He understands the recognized traditions of the monarchy too well to mind this. He has been nurtured and bred on the traditions of the monarchy.

Retained Poise

Queen Victoria did complain after the event that the bishops might have known their job better but throughout the coronation kept her poise and good humour, even when, walking past her heavy train, some of the bearers, halting unexpectedly, jerked her backwards.

Lords Paid Homage

When it came to the point when the peers of the Realm had to pay homage to the Queen, she was not startled by a justifiable but somewhat old-fashioned, and a little stiff, manner.

Engagement Announced

It was known before 1947 that Sir Lawrence and Lady Olivier, Noel Coward, and Cecil Beaton were among those organizing a ball in aid of the National Playing Fields Association at the Savoy Hotel for the night of the coronation.

TRACTORS

Save up to $240.
ON TRACTOR & PLOUGH, TREADED TIRES & LIGHTS AT YOUR FORD & MONARCH DEALER
HEAD MOTORS,
RSVILLE, ONT.
TRUCKS & TRACTORS

NOTICE

Commencing —
THURSDAY, June 4, 1953
The Jarvis Branch of The Canadian Bank of Commerce
— WILL CLOSE —
ON THURSDAYS at 12:00 Noon
J. C. Reynolds, Manager

Last!

tap that on't drip!

have proven that the new Magic will not drip or leak. Yet this tap costs no more than old-fashioned basins and but's water waste. Here's to replace.

Action

for Basin, Bath and Showers and see our full line CO Plumbing Equipment

J. Elliott

BRASS MFG. CO. LIMITED
100 - 20th Street - Toronto
9 - 10th Street - Vancouver

EAR TERM

tion

Only the give you

GLAM POWER

160 HORSE ENGINE

HYDRA-MAX SUPER DI

THE AUTO

LUNI

PHONE 95

GOOD DRIVERS DRIVE SAFE CARS... MAY IS SAFETY

Early Life Of Gracious Princess Taught Responsibilities

Dramatic Turn Of Events Resulted In Accession To Throne

In the dim, early hours of April 21, 1926, a girl was born to the gracious young Duke of York, and the world rejoiced. Few suspected that the baby Princess—baptized Elizabeth Alexandra Mary—would ever become the second Duke of York who ever became throne.

Yet there were some who realized that there was a possibility that Elizabeth might some day become Queen, although they could hardly have foreseen the dramatic turn of events which was to lead to her succession.

The Princess's initiation into the limitations of Royal life began when she was only eight months old; her mother while they went to Australia to inaugurate the new capital. Her early years were spent at 145 Piccadilly, into which her parents moved shortly after their arrival home. It was a happy environment—spacious rooms, quiet but elegant period furniture; a courtyard just large enough to shut out the noise of the Piccadilly traffic; a small garden at the back facing directly the unrelenting greensward of Hyde Park.

When learning to talk, the Princess mispronounced her name "Lilibet", a mistake which sounded so attractive that it was at once adopted and retained. Lilibet was a nickname given her by her grandparents and she loved it. She was a very lively child, with a love of music and a fondness for dancing. She was a very popular child, and her mother was proud of her.

When she was four, her sister Margaret was born, and thereafter they were inseparable. Most of her early childhood years were spent in the country, at one of the family houses—a historic Glamis Castle, complete with its ghost, or the Royal Lodge at Windsor.

Private Tutoring
Lilibet's upbringing was strict at home, because a princess at school attracts too much attention. Private tutors took her to read and her French and German by the time she was 10, in addition to the music, history and other subjects. She had her first piano lesson at the age of four, disliked geography which she chose to study, and has earned an honours degree. She saw examples everywhere in the duties, the constant callers. There were charities to be encouraged, important visitors to entertain, in all parts of the world. These crushing demands she saw accepted with interest. Duty came first; self-interest was a luxury lesson in the field of battle. She was a dutiful driver in the war and had a taste for joining the A.T.S., although her father wondered at it.

Coronation Supplement

Early Life Of Gracious Princess Taught Responsibilities

Dramatic Turn Of Events Resulted In Accession To Throne

In the dim, early hours of April 21, 1926, a girl was born to the gracious young Duke of York, and the world rejoiced. Few suspected that the baby Princess—baptized Elizabeth Alexandra Mary—would ever become the second Duke of York who ever became throne.

Yet there were some who realized that there was a possibility that Elizabeth might some day become Queen, although they could hardly have foreseen the dramatic turn of events which was to lead to her succession.

The Princess's initiation into the limitations of Royal life began when she was only eight months old; her mother while they went to Australia to inaugurate the new capital. Her early years were spent at 145 Piccadilly, into which her parents moved shortly after their arrival home. It was a happy environment—spacious rooms, quiet but elegant period furniture; a courtyard just large enough to shut out the noise of the Piccadilly traffic; a small garden at the back facing directly the unrelenting greensward of Hyde Park.

When learning to talk, the Princess mispronounced her name "Lilibet", a mistake which sounded so attractive that it was at once adopted and retained. Lilibet was a nickname given her by her grandparents and she loved it. She was a very lively child, with a love of music and a fondness for dancing. She was a very popular child, and her mother was proud of her.

When she was four, her sister Margaret was born, and thereafter they were inseparable. Most of her early childhood years were spent in the country, at one of the family houses—a historic Glamis Castle, complete with its ghost, or the Royal Lodge at Windsor.

Private Tutoring
Lilibet's upbringing was strict at home, because a princess at school attracts too much attention. Private tutors took her to read and her French and German by the time she was 10, in addition to the music, history and other subjects. She had her first piano lesson at the age of four, disliked geography which she chose to study, and has earned an honours degree. She saw examples everywhere in the duties, the constant callers. There were charities to be encouraged, important visitors to entertain, in all parts of the world. These crushing demands she saw accepted with interest. Duty came first; self-interest was a luxury lesson in the field of battle. She was a dutiful driver in the war and had a taste for joining the A.T.S., although her father wondered at it.

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II

The spirit of coronation joy is reflected in the new coronation robes for the Queen. The robes are made of silk and satin and are of a rich red color. They will be worn by the Queen at the coronation ceremony.

The Queen's Busy Day

By any computation the present Queen is one of the busiest women in the world. It could be said that all lines of communication in the Empire covering nearly a quarter of the world's land surface are centered on a point known as Buckingham Palace. This makes her the head of the government in the United Kingdom, Wales, and Scotland, head of the judiciary in England and the sole representative of the nation in international affairs.

One Of The World's Busiest People In Role Of Monarch, Wife, Mother

By any computation the present Queen is one of the busiest women in the world. It could be said that all lines of communication in the Empire covering nearly a quarter of the world's land surface are centered on a point known as Buckingham Palace. This makes her the head of the government in the United Kingdom, Wales, and Scotland, head of the judiciary in England and the sole representative of the nation in international affairs.

Coronation Supplement

Early Life Of Gracious Princess Taught Responsibilities

Dramatic Turn Of Events Resulted In Accession To Throne

In the dim, early hours of April 21, 1926, a girl was born to the gracious young Duke of York, and the world rejoiced. Few suspected that the baby Princess—baptized Elizabeth Alexandra Mary—would ever become the second Duke of York who ever became throne.

Yet there were some who realized that there was a possibility that Elizabeth might some day become Queen, although they could hardly have foreseen the dramatic turn of events which was to lead to her succession.

The Princess's initiation into the limitations of Royal life began when she was only eight months old; her mother while they went to Australia to inaugurate the new capital. Her early years were spent at 145 Piccadilly, into which her parents moved shortly after their arrival home. It was a happy environment—spacious rooms, quiet but elegant period furniture; a courtyard just large enough to shut out the noise of the Piccadilly traffic; a small garden at the back facing directly the unrelenting greensward of Hyde Park.

When learning to talk, the Princess mispronounced her name "Lilibet", a mistake which sounded so attractive that it was at once adopted and retained. Lilibet was a nickname given her by her grandparents and she loved it. She was a very lively child, with a love of music and a fondness for dancing. She was a very popular child, and her mother was proud of her.

When she was four, her sister Margaret was born, and thereafter they were inseparable. Most of her early childhood years were spent in the country, at one of the family houses—a historic Glamis Castle, complete with its ghost, or the Royal Lodge at Windsor.

Private Tutoring
Lilibet's upbringing was strict at home, because a princess at school attracts too much attention. Private tutors took her to read and her French and German by the time she was 10, in addition to the music, history and other subjects. She had her first piano lesson at the age of four, disliked geography which she chose to study, and has earned an honours degree. She saw examples everywhere in the duties, the constant callers. There were charities to be encouraged, important visitors to entertain, in all parts of the world. These crushing demands she saw accepted with interest. Duty came first; self-interest was a luxury lesson in the field of battle. She was a dutiful driver in the war and had a taste for joining the A.T.S., although her father wondered at it.

Coronation Supplement

Early Life Of Gracious Princess Taught Responsibilities

Dramatic Turn Of Events Resulted In Accession To Throne

In the dim, early hours of April 21, 1926, a girl was born to the gracious young Duke of York, and the world rejoiced. Few suspected that the baby Princess—baptized Elizabeth Alexandra Mary—would ever become the second Duke of York who ever became throne.

Yet there were some who realized that there was a possibility that Elizabeth might some day become Queen, although they could hardly have foreseen the dramatic turn of events which was to lead to her succession.

The Princess's initiation into the limitations of Royal life began when she was only eight months old; her mother while they went to Australia to inaugurate the new capital. Her early years were spent at 145 Piccadilly, into which her parents moved shortly after their arrival home. It was a happy environment—spacious rooms, quiet but elegant period furniture; a courtyard just large enough to shut out the noise of the Piccadilly traffic; a small garden at the back facing directly the unrelenting greensward of Hyde Park.

When learning to talk, the Princess mispronounced her name "Lilibet", a mistake which sounded so attractive that it was at once adopted and retained. Lilibet was a nickname given her by her grandparents and she loved it. She was a very lively child, with a love of music and a fondness for dancing. She was a very popular child, and her mother was proud of her.

When she was four, her sister Margaret was born, and thereafter they were inseparable. Most of her early childhood years were spent in the country, at one of the family houses—a historic Glamis Castle, complete with its ghost, or the Royal Lodge at Windsor.

Private Tutoring
Lilibet's upbringing was strict at home, because a princess at school attracts too much attention. Private tutors took her to read and her French and German by the time she was 10, in addition to the music, history and other subjects. She had her first piano lesson at the age of four, disliked geography which she chose to study, and has earned an honours degree. She saw examples everywhere in the duties, the constant callers. There were charities to be encouraged, important visitors to entertain, in all parts of the world. These crushing demands she saw accepted with interest. Duty came first; self-interest was a luxury lesson in the field of battle. She was a dutiful driver in the war and had a taste for joining the A.T.S., although her father wondered at it.

Coronation Supplement

Early Life Of Gracious Princess Taught Responsibilities

Dramatic Turn Of Events Resulted In Accession To Throne

In the dim, early hours of April 21, 1926, a girl was born to the gracious young Duke of York, and the world rejoiced. Few suspected that the baby Princess—baptized Elizabeth Alexandra Mary—would ever become the second Duke of York who ever became throne.

Yet there were some who realized that there was a possibility that Elizabeth might some day become Queen, although they could hardly have foreseen the dramatic turn of events which was to lead to her succession.

The Princess's initiation into the limitations of Royal life began when she was only eight months old; her mother while they went to Australia to inaugurate the new capital. Her early years were spent at 145 Piccadilly, into which her parents moved shortly after their arrival home. It was a happy environment—spacious rooms, quiet but elegant period furniture; a courtyard just large enough to shut out the noise of the Piccadilly traffic; a small garden at the back facing directly the unrelenting greensward of Hyde Park.

When learning to talk, the Princess mispronounced her name "Lilibet", a mistake which sounded so attractive that it was at once adopted and retained. Lilibet was a nickname given her by her grandparents and she loved it. She was a very lively child, with a love of music and a fondness for dancing. She was a very popular child, and her mother was proud of her.

When she was four, her sister Margaret was born, and thereafter they were inseparable. Most of her early childhood years were spent in the country, at one of the family houses—a historic Glamis Castle, complete with its ghost, or the Royal Lodge at Windsor.

Private Tutoring
Lilibet's upbringing was strict at home, because a princess at school attracts too much attention. Private tutors took her to read and her French and German by the time she was 10, in addition to the music, history and other subjects. She had her first piano lesson at the age of four, disliked geography which she chose to study, and has earned an honours degree. She saw examples everywhere in the duties, the constant callers. There were charities to be encouraged, important visitors to entertain, in all parts of the world. These crushing demands she saw accepted with interest. Duty came first; self-interest was a luxury lesson in the field of battle. She was a dutiful driver in the war and had a taste for joining the A.T.S., although her father wondered at it.