ANNE HIRST Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: I am 24, and for five years I've been going to school. I care for him terribly—but he never commits himself, though he implies I'm his only genuine interest! He never makes a date, never travels, never has a great deal, and does write when he is due home.

This is why he has not met a man, 11 years older than I am, who has fallen in love with me. This man treats me beautifully, makes me feel important, he is talented and cultured, and prosperous. If I knew I stand no chance to marry the boy I love, I am pretty sure I could fall in love again, for the man is attractive and we are compatible. We've gone together for only three months, he has asked me to marry him. My family knows his people are they admire him, and encourage his visits.

"How can I put the boy I love to the test? I've got to know but I don't want to seem to favor."

LOVE OR HABIT? I am not convinced you care "terribly" for the boy you've gone with for five years, or the very idea of falling in love with another man would not occur to you. Evidently you have not gone with another boy all this time, and this one has become a habit.

Your situation today is the result of having given up cheaply. You should have handed your heart very differently. He has come to see you when he pleased, instead of according you the customary formality of making a date; for all you know, he may be seeing other girls, too. You allowed him to be so high-handed because you loved him, and were afraid you'd lose him. No wonder he has taken advantage of that!

Next time, if you're going to hell, tell him you are sorry but you have another engagement. Repeat this a few times, and he will reveal where you stand with him. I think he would be a poor risk as a husband, for he would continue to make his own rules and expect you to abide by them. However, I doubt that my opinion will carry weight.

Before the second game of the Bruins-Red Wings series, a panel discussion on health was most interesting. Those participating were Elizabeth Chant, Robertson, Dr. Gordon Bates, and Dr. W. K. Elliot, psychiatrist. The main purpose of the discussion was to promote better understanding of the importance of good eating habits, particularly in regard to children.

AN APPRECIATION "Dear Anne Hirst: Over two years ago, I wrote you about getting married without telling our families.

You advised against this secrecy, and explained that we talked things over, and decided to wait till things straightened out for us both. Both our families needed the contribution we made from our salaries.

MARGE I rejoice with you and congratulate you on your good sense and patience.

Appreciation is always heart-warming, no matter when it comes. Thank you for yours.

BOYS TAKE A GIRL AT HER OWN VALUATION. Even in these casual days, nice young men admire a girl who keeps them on their toes.

Modern Etiquette

Q—How and when does the bridegroom give his fiancée the minister who performs the wedding ceremony?

A—The bridegroom should give the money or cheque (enclosed in an envelope) to his best man, who gives it to the minister after the ceremony, and of course, privately.

Q—Is it considered proper for a woman to adjust her make-up at the table after dining in a public restaurant?

A—This was formerly frowned upon, but society has now relaxed enough to permit the pairs most women deem needful to their lips and shiny noses after eating.

Q—Is it necessary for a young woman to rise when being introduced to the mother of a girl friend?

A—Most certainly; to remain seated would be exceedingly ill-bred.

Q—When friends, who have moved into a new home, invite you to an "open house," are you obligated to bring a gift?

A—No; this is merely an invitation to visit these friends and closed in an envelope) to his best man, who gives it to the minister after the ceremony, and of course, privately.

Q—Should a man ever hand his coat to a woman for her to assist him in putting it on?

A—Only if he is theatrical or very feeble. Otherwise, he should be capable of getting into his coat without the woman's assistance.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

Last week over 500 women baked extra pies, cakes and cookies for their families to feed on, and then the 600 loosed their pinneers, pressed their prettiest dresses, and by train, bus or car, headed for the O.A.C. in Guelph. It was the occasion of the Fifth Women's Institute Officers' Conference for Ontario.

Delegates came from points as far distant as the borders of the Maritime Provinces and from the northern district of Cochrane. It was a two-day affair so there were many from distant points who stayed in residence at the College from Wednesday night to Saturday morning.

Dr. J. D. MacLachlan, president of the O.A.C. welcomed the delegates and outlined the work and opportunities of the students coming from farms. Two interesting — and interesting — visitors throughout the session were the Reverend Mother, Mary Alicia and Sister Marie Adela, avid Canada workers from the Dominican Republic. It was a two-day affair so there were many from distant points who stayed in residence at the College from Wednesday night to Saturday morning.

At the same time, perhaps, he was doing exactly the same thing. He was afraid some other man would take you from him, so he was charming every time you met.

In cases like this it often happens that old habits suddenly pop out on you when you don't like them. You were afraid, because you thought him so good-looking, that you would not be able to hold him against competition. So every time you met, you were just attracted physically.

you are in the divorce court member, all the thoughtless people who go through the divorce courts every day are sure that they were in love with the man who is now their ex-husband. But I want to say to you that only a fraction of these marriages were really love marriages. Nor do I believe that there is any truth in love at first sight. It is absolutely impossible. Nothing could be more ridiculous than the belief that two people, meeting for the first time, can fall in love. They may not speak the same language. One might adore bebo and the other Brahms; one might find heaven in a ballroom and the other on a mountain top; one might love children and the other hate the sight of them. Love at first sight is a pipe-dream of the imagination.

Could It Have Happened? Have you ever seen a young man and a young woman standing together, looking at each other, and wondering what they are doing? They are just attracted physically. Calvert Sports Column by Elmer Ferguson

A legend of professional sport died in the most surprising sport of the 1935 Stanley Cup series, the power of all-star Detroit Red Wings were humbled, and knocked out of hockey's classic by the no-stars Boston Bruins.

The legend is that all professional sports managers possess rasping tongues, acid vocabularies, that they drive their charges mercilessly by torrents of abuse and threats. If it ever was true, and we believe it was correct only in some isolated instances, it doesn't hold in professional hockey today. A player may be sharply reprimanded in private for some mishap, and some coach and manager will be replaced old-fashioned and out-moded bullying. If it ever existed generally.

It was a game played in Detroit, it was apparent the great Red Wing machine was grinding its gears. Bruins had already won three games. Another defeat would put Wings out of the series. Jack Adams called for a players' conference. There were those, on the fringe, who thought that the Wings leader would rant, roar, abuse the players, seek to inspire them by threats. But, as it turned out, Adams talked to his players as a kindly father might talk to a beloved baby son who had slightly misbehaved.

Love is a mixture of the physical, mental, and spiritual between two people, and it cannot be achieved by force. Nature's greatest arrangement is the fierce flame of the love, the fire that affection has to take its place, and it is only by the gentlest of means that the fire can be kept from burning out. Burglars Defeat All Known Safeguards

So runs the starting statement of a special Study Group set up by the Insurance Institute of London.

They trace the endless struggle between men seeking to protect their property and thieves trying to steal it.

Locks, bars, bolts, safes—even bank strong-rooms—have been labeled the last word in burglar-proof protection. But all have given way to the attack of determined cracksmen.

Canadians food surpluses — in the exception of wheat — are said to vary between 6 and 12 per cent. The uncertainty of nature and the impossibility of precise gauging of future needs will prevent any cutting down of this narrow margin.

There is no problem of over-production; there is only a problem of maldistribution.

Once Canadian farmers begin to cut down on their production according to known existing markets, they will soon find these markets shrinking.

Let our farm leaders go after the long promised marketing legislation; there is only Canada's farmers to market their own goods inter-provincially and internationally. Let them work out plans for orderly marketing.

What is the solution to this problem? It is not by the negative approach of restricted production.

It is your vocabulary average? If it is not you should recognize 11-000 words (not counting the neologisms) that are in the language of a few more physicians attribute it to the lack of vitamins A, C, and E.
