Spring is fruitfully peeping around the corner. Old Sol has raised his thermostat; crows are flying noisily across the fields; robins are tentatively twittering from tree-tops and swamp frogs are singing.

In the garden snowdrops are blooming; daffodils buds are swelling; spikéd-shrub tulip leaves are appearing; tender buds of flowering shrubs are taking on form and colour and the first ruby-red hothouse leaves are beginning to uncurl.

In the house every room from attic to cellar is becoming less attractive. Bright sunlight flooding the rooms reveals the need for spring-housecleaning. Painted surfaces have a dingy look; papered walls you hoped might do another year show dark, un-sightly streaks along the seams.

In the fields wheat is taking on a greenish hue and looks fairly promising. Clover? It is too early yet to predict how well clover has survived the winter. Well-drained fields are devoid of surface water and in low lying fields swampy patches are less in evidence.

In the stables spring calves have begun to arrive. Cows and heifers, let out for exercise sniff the air expectoratively, the smell of early new growth is in their nostrils. They stand pensively looking over fences and gambol around the yard at intervals and then return unwillingly to dry hay and dairy concentrates. Dogs and cats roam the fields in search of unwary mice and rabbits. Sparrows keep up an incessant twittering in and around the buildings.

And among all this response of nature to the call of spring there sits one inanimate contraption — the farm tractor! In-sensitive to the God-given miracle of new life it sits there — not a tremor of expectancy

Q. How should an engraved invitation for a home wedding be worded?

A. It may read thusly: "Mr. and Mrs. William Jones request the marriage of their daughter, Margaret Anne, to Mr. Frederick Allan Sprague on Saturday the nineteenth of December at four o'clock, twenty-two Beech Street."

Q. Is it correct for a man to use the double-sheet type of stationery for his personal correspondence?

A. It is all right, but the single sheet is considered more masculine.

Q. If a close friend of a funeral is necessary to wear black clothes?

A. No. However, one should wear subdued clothes, and avoid any gay colors.

Q. Is it permissible to examine the various dishes on a cafeteria counter before selecting a certain one?

A. If this can be done quickly, it is thoughtless of those behind you in line if you deliberately too long, and, also, it is rude to be conspicuous in selecting a dish that seems to contain the largest portion.

Q. Should one ever select a wedding gift that is something the bride can use, if one is not acquainted with the bridegroom?

A. No; it is better always to select something that can be used and enjoyed by both the bride and bridegroom.

Q. Should the used silver be gathered up before removing the used plates from the dinner table?

A. No; the silver should be left on the plates, and all removed from the table together.

Q. If one has just moved into a new neighborhood and some of the neighbors have paid calls, how soon should one return these calls?

A. Within two weeks. Failure to do so is a strong indication that the friendships are not desired.

Keeping Warm — At chicken farms throughout Europe, incubators of this "THING" are common. These six-hour-old chicks seem quite content in the arms of a young Hamburg, Germany, lass. And she seems quite content, too.

with shaking knees taking the chair for the first time. Here and there members up against the problem of filling an office that nobody wants — and I mean nobody — for in most organizations there are many workers but few apparent leaders. I say "apparent" advisedly because a good worker has all the qualifications of a good officer — to a greater or lesser degree. True, but his leadership qualities may be dormant but they will slowly but surely develop — given the opportunity — if her interest is genuine and active. It is up to the older members to encourage and promote installation of younger members to office — and then back them with their own years of experience — without criticism or prejudice. New blood is necessary to keep pace with the times. And for in-crease of the four-minute mile, work there is no better lead than our own magazine — "Home and Country."

ANNE HIRST Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: I am from overseas, and have no one else to turn to. Please help me before I go out of my mind. I married my husband when he was visiting over there; I was only 17, and my family tried to stop me, but I thought I knew all the answers. Now we have three children. I could have loved my husband dearly, except for his insane jealousy. He gives us everything we want — except what my wife needs most, her husband's faith. Without any reason, he accuses me of seeing men when I go shopping, and he even thinks I let them in our home! I am attracted men without even trying. I have turned my back on them all. It is only my faith in God that gives me the strength to go on. Much as I love the children, sometimes I feel like walking out on everything. (He does not like people and found fault with me from the start.) I am a HOME IS PRISON. I am not allowed to leave the house at any time. I make him understand that a woman has to have some change, but it is no use. He will not let me go anywhere. I work hard, and keep the children and the house clean and neat, and myself, too. I get so nervous I cry day and night, and I am dead inside. My husband is a miser from a nice family, and he knew the good life we had in my own home. I have never been back since coming here. Only God knows what I go through, giving the best years of my life to a man who doesn't treat me. Please, please help make him see how unbearable things are for me! He does not know of an writing you, but he reads your column."

UNHAPPY AND DIGUSTED? When a man marries a girl from another country he has a double obligation to see that she is a happy wife. Uphoiled from her own people, she must look to him to provide the social life that will balance her homemaking routine and keep her mind and spirit employed and alert. In this way, she stays young and interesting; her home becomes a center where she blooms into full maturity that reflects credit upon him as a citizen, a husband, and the father of a fine family. This husband has offended all along the way. He so fears that other men will be attracted to his wife that he condemns her to veritable prison of loneliness. Her whole being is insulted by his groundless suspicions; he c spirit starves for companionship; her personality sinks into a nothingness. Is it any wonder she feels dead inside? Without the inspiration of friendship, how can he expect her to be an adequate

Real "Ball-And-Chain" Taken To Altar

When 32-year-old Maxwell B. Moorefield of Sydney, N.S.W., took his "ball and chain" to the altar he was wearing a real one. His bride weighed a neat 119 pounds. The real ball and chain weighed 45 pounds. It happened when Maxwell was being given a bachelor send-off by his friends just before he drove to the church. They chanced his ankle to the ball, which was made of concrete, and threw away the key. So as not to keep his bride waiting, Maxwell went chained to church. Blacksmiths and locksmiths were sent for, but did not place and then someone arrived with numerous bunches of keys, one of which was at last found to fit the lock on Maxwell's ankle.

"So far as the wife is concerned it's just a case of mind over matter, old man. She doesn't mind and I don't matter!"

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN by Elmer Ferguson

The fabled 4-minute mile, a mirage that has lured the world's greatest runners over the years but has remained tantalizingly just beyond their grasp, may finally become a reality at the 1944 British Empire and Commonwealth Games in Vancouver this year, July 26 to August 7.

For the figure-filberts, the perfect four-minute mile should be run in laps like this: First lap: 58.5; Second lap: 59.5 (1.50 at the half); Third lap: 61.0; Fourth lap: 61.0 (2.02 at the half). Add it up: four minutes flat.

History's greatest mile was run by Gunder Hagg of Sweden back in 1945. He ripped it off in four minutes, one and three-tenths seconds. In 1944, Arne Anderson, another Swede, reeled off the mile in 4:01.6, the second-fastest ever run.

Hagg's record still holds. But today, a whole new group of middle-distance runners is bidding for a new record at the classic mile distance, and beyond that, for the elusive 4-minute mile. Men like Roger Bannister of England, John Landy of Australia, and Wes Santee of the United States have made back-breaking and heart-breaking efforts to match the Swede, and reach a few strides beyond Gunder's record, and to hit the 4-minute mile.

Last June, Bannister clocked off the 1760 yards in 4:02 flat, and Australia's brilliant Landy matched that time in December. A year earlier, Landy was clocked 4:02.1. Santee's best mark to date is 4:02.3, but experts feel he is capable of doing much better, especially if he can get competition from men like Bannister and Landy.

Santee is not, of course, eligible for the Empire Games, but Bannister and Landy will both be there, possibly, along with a couple of newcomers who are aspirants to the top track's Hall of Fame. They are Murray Halberg of New Zealand, and England's young bank clerk, Gordon Pirie, though the latter is by no means a certain entry.

But put Bannister, Landy, Halberg, and perhaps Pirie, too, on the starter's mark at Vancouver on Saturday, August 7, and provide them with a perfect track, hot, sunny, windless weather, and the elusive 4-minute mile may be elusive no longer.

Of course, when the big Vancouver show ends, American promoters will be doing their best to encourage post-Games track meets, and the four-minute mile isn't realized in Vancouver, it may be shortly afterwards. The men are available. The time is ripe.

A Hospital Run Just For Birds

The birds in New Delhi have a hospital of their own. It is situated within the premises of Jain Mandir, Chandni Chowk, Delhi.

Founded by a wealthy Jain family with the object of providing medical care for stragglers of six men, including the two who are exclusively engaged on cleaning and disinfecting.

The bird-hospital staff consists of six men, including the doctor, who is devoted to his work and spares no effort in saving a life.

This doctor firmly believes that Nature is the best healer. "Given food, nursing, good diet, and freedom from hazards of outside life, a bird usually recovers without much difficulty," he says.

When a sick or maimed bird is admitted into the hospital it is first given a mild laxative, and then its wings are cleaned thoroughly. In cases of bruised skin or sores, it may be necessary to perform a surgical operation.

If a bird is seriously ill, it is put alone in a wire-netted cubicle and kept on a liquid diet for some time. Later, it is treated for worms, stones in the stomach, skin diseases, or any other ailment diagnosed by the doctor.

Special attention is paid to dry grass, cooked rice, green peas, or cabbage leaf, though this varies according to the patient's requirements.

Lucky Break When Car Broke Down

A one-arm prospector has found what is likely to be a rich uranium field two miles from the South African-Southern Rhodesian border customs house at Beit Bridge — all because his car broke down there.

Prospector L. C. Byerley was driving from the border along the main Bulawayo road when his car spluttered to a stop.

Annoyed, hot and dusty, he got out to find the trouble. After a while, he paused and looked around. Across the road his keen prospector's eyes spotted something that looked like an ordinary, so he made a mental note of the location.

Soon afterwards he returned with his prospector's hammer and his Geiger counter and examined some very interesting rocks right by the roadside. He took them away with him, discovered they were radio-active and pegged out his claim.

Now he has signed an agreement with a Johannesburg mining house which plans to build a $350,000 plant to develop the deposits.

Never Won Title, But How He Could Fight!

In a quiet cemetery in far-off Australia, a monument stands before a grave on a little hill. An inscription is carved on that monument. It reads: "Sleep, Peter, sleep, brave champion. All hushed, we gather around the ring while snow-white flowers, mist-eyed, we fling within the grave. The fight is done. Sleep, Peter, sleep. The hero's rest be thine in Mother Earth's broad breast."

It's an unusual inscription to be carved on a tombstone. The story of the man who lives within that grave is no ordinary one.

Peter Jackson was a modest Negro lad who, at sixteen years of age, was already winning fame as a great all-around athlete in his homeland of Australia. He was best known as a fine swimmer and diver, and, though few who first introduced the Australian crawl stroke to the United States. Besides, Jackson was noted as record-holder for swimming under water.

To his swimming and diving achievements, Peter added many rowing triumphs, becoming a one-time Australian sculling champion.

Peter went to sea at an early age. While aboard ship on one voyage, he was forced into a fist fight with a brutal officer who had almost caused a mutiny because of his cruel treatment of the men. Although greatly outnumbered, Jackson licked him severely in a fierce rough-and-tumble battle.

This, besides, Peter Jackson's ring career. It was in 1933 in

"Tex" And His Friends — "Tex," a three-year-old French movie dog, poses with other members of a cast which was featured in an exhibition at a large Paris store. Tex has appeared in French movies in roles reminiscent of the late canine idol, King-Of-The-Ring.

Australia that he first entered the professional ring. He was a magnificent fighting man, both in ability and appearance. Peter stood 6 feet, 1 1/2 inches tall, weighed 192 pounds, and was a picture of grace and rhythm in the ring.

But Peter Jackson could fight. How that man could fight! He was an absolute master of boxing, as fast as a streak, and a terrific fighter. Many have sworn that Peter Jackson was the greatest boxer ever to step into the ring.

Whether he was or not is hard to prove. The fact is, however, that Jackson never seemed to extend himself in his fights. It was as if he was always un-der the weather, fighting only hard enough to win or stay even with his adversary.

In a few short years, Peter Jackson had climbed to the top as champion of England and Australia. By 1939, Jackson had fought everyone he could meet in those countries and was ready to seek further for someone to fight. Bill Stern in "Favorite Fight Stories."

In Europe, no man would extend the ring with him. He was too dangerous to fight.

Peter Jackson went on to America. By this time he had determined to get a crack at the world's heavyweight title. He was drawn to meet him, because his opponents with consummate ease. It was the worst of the world's champions was John L. Sullivan, whose boast in the past was that he could lick any man in the world. But when Peter Jackson raised his voice in acceptance of the challenge, John L. turned a deaf ear. It might have been better if he had said "No." He would not fight a Negro in the ring.

Peter Jackson repeated his challenge again and again. The word got around that John L. was finally forced to meet him. Finally, one leading heavyweight agreed to match with Jackson. It was a young ex-bank clerk named James J. Corbett. The battle that followed is a memorable one in fight history. Fought on May 21, 1901, the bout lasted 61 grim bloody rounds. Corbett, a clever but dangerous fighter, was no more than a match for Peter Jackson. It was generally assumed that Jackson, aware of the fact that he would never get another fight in the United States if he won too quickly, "carried" Corbett by stalling off his attack for round after round. In every case, the exhibition given by Jackson fooled nobody. Jackson's superlative ability in the ring was quite obvious. After the Corbett fight, not only Sullivan but every other American fighter who had a chance to meet him in his career ducked under the name of this great Negro fighter.

After only three matches during the ring following the Corbett draw. For the next six years he was cruelly ignored although he was a fine swimmer and diver, and, though few who first introduced the Australian crawl stroke to the United States. Besides, Jackson was noted as record-holder for swimming under water.
