What I am saying will not be news to farm folk but it may surprise a few others.

It's this way. Baby calves are much the same as other babies— milk for them must not be too milk for them must not be use rich or digestive trouble follows. A cow cannot make up special formulas or dilute over-rich milk, so in her case Mother Nature takes over and provides the cow with milk that is low in butterfat content—in other words, it is just right for a baby calf. As the calf gets older the mother's milk gets richer. Not only that but the normal lactation period for a cow is nine to ten months just long enough to give the calf time as it can eat hay, oats or grass. That was an ideal arrangement in the days when cattle roamed at will and bred and raised families according to the laws of patter. • It would be passing strange, and what might be termed a reverse play, if a renaissance in lacrosse should be in-spired in this year of grace by the fair sex. And yet, it's possible.

Here is Canada, we don't associate lacrosse, marked as it is by hard checking, with the girls. As played in these lacrosse is no place for a lady.

But in England, it's quite different. While lacrosse is played to a surprising extent by the male athletes on the other side, it is also a very popular game among the girls, to the point that a team of English women players is due to tour the United States this year, starting this month or next, while a male American team shuttles to England.

St. Leonard's School, St. Andrews, Scotland and Princess Helena College, England, were the first British girls' schools to take to lacrosse after Queen Victoria had many years ago watched a game between teams of French Canadians and Iroquois Indians.

The schools did so because it was considered an ideal and richimic recreation for young ladies. "Lacrosse" it was stated, "had movements based on the natural body movement, and both sides of the body are brought into play." Its development was hampered by prejudices against the participation of women in sport, which no doubt was typical of the Victorian era, but following the collapse of most of such prejudices through events of World War I, lacrosse for girls began to establish itself.

By 1930, there were national associations flourishing it all four countries of the United Kingdom.

And today, the game rates the third most popular of all women's team games behind netball and field hockey, with its own "international", Strange, isn't it, that the mother country should in recent years have taken with more favor to Canada's own national game, than we in Canada!

Well, it looks very much as though the ancient and hallowed sport of cricket is going to get a bit of a face-lifting; and we can imagine the shudder passing through the frames of those purists who love to recall, over their port, how the Duke of Wellington said that the Battle Wellington said that the Battle of Waterloo was won on the playing-fields of Eton. But, alas, the Aussies will be elsewhere occupied this Summer, and the lads who back the clubs have been looking gloomily at the prospect of further deficits. So now a group of business men, who love cricket but think it could do with a bit more ginger, have come forward with an offer of Trophies and Cash. And, far from being soundly spanked and sent to stand in a corner, those making the offer have been warmly welcomed by the

As everybody knows—(we just learned it a couple of seconds ago) — the Marylebone Cricket Club is recognized as the holy-of-holies in cricket, and if anybody would be likely to frown on such innovations it would be the M.C.C. Yet here is how Mr. Ronald Aird, secretary of that august body, looks at it:
