LESSONS FROM HISTORY

— By Lewis Milligan —

POLITICIANS, ECONOMISTS, and labor leaders in particular can learn much from even an elementary study of history, ancient and modern. One of the most instructive periods is that of the first two centuries A.D. of the Roman Empire. The Romans had gained their empire by military conquest, followed by liberal treatment of the conquered peoples. In their wars with Carthage they had released the Mediterranean from the control of Carthaginian merchants who were trade monopolists and claimed exclusive rights in those waters, sinking foreign trading ships on sight. In Rome itself, however, there was constant intrigue and often open battles between political groups for power. As in Soviet Russia today, the Roman emperors thought nothing of disposing of their rivals on trumped-up charges, and several emperors were assassinated by their guards.

Many and varied were the types of emperors, and they resorted to a variety of means of appalling or pleasing the populace. Nero, the most brazen and cruel of the despots, posed as a patron of the arts. To impress his subjects he built an enormous palace, garnished with gold and precious stones, in the port of which was a statue of himself one hundred feet high. He over-played the part, however, and was forced to commit suicide.

In the following year there were three emperors, one after the other, all of whom died violent deaths. The next emperor, Vespasian, was the very opposite in type to that of Nero. He was the typical modern glad-hander who wise-cracked in public and considered himself one of the people. He commenced the building of the famous Colosseum to provide thrilling diversion for the populace. He restored the state from bankruptcy and died a natural death after ten years of efficient administration.

Seventeen years later, Domitian, another autocrat, came to power. He was very efficient, but ruthless — a mixture of Stalin and Hitler. He employed a host of informers and one never knew who would be the next victim of the emperor's suspicion. He enjoyed terrorizing his friends with hints of impending doom. The tables were turned and he himself was murdered. He was followed by Nerva who dismissed the informers and sought to placate the people with policies familiar in our own times: state loans to farmers at moderate interest, and "mothers' allowances" to help pay the cost of bringing up a family. Naturally, such paternal policies were popular, but they called for more and more state aid and higher taxes.

Gradually there was a slowing-down of industry and trade. As a remedy, farm laborers were compelled to work on the fields, were bound to the land and sank to the conditions of serfs. Skilled workmen were compelled to join guilds (closed shops) and the guilds were compelled to produce commodities according to government planning. Business was placed under similar restrictions. The Emperor Diocletian issued an edict setting the maximum price at which goods might be sold, and denounced "unrestricted profiteering" and "rampant individualism" as the causes that made the regulations necessary.

Things went from bad to worse. Merchants went out of business to avoid excessive taxation, and when the money could not be obtained from others, the councillors themselves had to pay over everything they owned. The final result was that the value of "purchasing power" of money was delapidated and it ceased to be widely used. Industry and commerce all but vanished, and the standard of living became very low. Imperial authority collapsed.

Thus the decline of the Roman Empire began before the barbarian nations invaded Italy without resistance. As one historian puts it: "A general decline of trade caused unemployment in the cities. At the same time there came a drift from the country into the cities. The result was an idle, shiftless mob which politicians kept quiet by free distribution of bread, oil, wine, and free shows." Yes, we can learn much from history.

Observation is one of the most enduring pleasures of life.

FORESTS ARE INVALUABLE

CANADA, among the nations possessing great forest industries, will take part in the fourth World Forestry Congress in India, December 12 to 22, when government specialists of many nations will discuss developments in the world's major forest areas.

This congress is only the fourth of its kind in nearly 30 years. Previous meetings were at Rome in 1926, Budapest, 1936, and Helsinki, 1949. It now is linked with the United Nations through the Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO).

Canada's representatives are expected to be Dr. D. A. MacDonald, head of the forestry division of the federal resources department, and Col. H. H. Jenkins, director of the federal forestry products laboratories.

But trees are not just the business of the specialist. They concern everyone, for without them the world could not survive. They not only provide the world's most widely-used raw materials; they protect the soil, conserve natural resources and contribute to the general well-being of mankind.

The coming congress at Dehra Dun, site of the Indian forest research institute, differs from previous meetings. This time, it is hoped, it will provide an opportunity to show people everywhere the vital part that forestry plays in their lives.

Some people believe the world has enough trees, but that they are unevenly distributed. Others hold that the forests of great timber have been diminished over the years to a point where forest conservation becomes a simple matter of self-protection.

There is one great area of forest land — in the tropics — which despite modern progress still yields only a small economic return compared with the forests of the temperate zones. Tropical silviculture therefore will be an important theme at Dehra Dun.

But the congress will demonstrate to everyone that forests are invaluable. Scientific timber-cutting whereby a forest area is made to yield a "crop" indefinitely has spread widely in recent years. The fight against destructive forest fires has been organized more intensely each year.

Now, everyone should realize that needless waste of forest assets is a portent of disaster.

ACADEMIC LEVEL

THE VICE PRESIDENT of the Ontario secondary school teachers' federation says academic standards in Ontario high schools have been "watered down" to meet the needs of mass education. D. L. Tough, principal of Forest Hill Collegiate in Toronto, told more than 200 teachers at the O.S.T.F. conference in Windsor: "The present course is not sufficiently challenging for the average and above-average student because lower levels have been accepted in the general courses offered."

AMONG the scenes which are deeply impressed on my mind, none exceed in sublimity the primeval forests undisturbed by the hand of man.

News of the Countryside

From The Record's Correspondents

Several from this vicinity attended the dance held in Wiggins Hall on Friday night, sponsored by the Young Peoples Club of that vicinity. Mr. Clarence Mitchell is spending this week in the north country hunting deer.

A number from this district attended the sale of the late Mr. T. Brown held in Jarvis on Saturday. Mrs. Max Bowyer accompanied by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Judd spent the week end in Maryland, U.S.A. Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Chase in Simcoe. Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Mitchell spent Sunday in Hamilton.

A well known Hamilton speaker, Edith Hyder addressed the Haldimand Juniors and guests at their annual Junior Farmer Banquet held at the Rural Youth Centre, Kitchener on Thursday, November 8th.

Mrs. Hyder compared the life of Canadian youth in Freedom and the life of personal initiative almost untried in the dominated autocratic lands of Russia, many formerly free democracies. She gave many examples of the truth of her statements from having met and personally interviewed many young people from other lands.

How Communism adjudicators in both European lands and Red China tried first to influence the farmer and owners of the lands. Their resistance was the strongest of all against the confessions of the farmer and owners of the lands. Their resistance was the strongest of all against the confessions of the farmer and owners of the lands.

She gave many personal snapshots and stories of her new people and we were interested that they had given her the name of "Mother of Democracy" as she liked all of them.

An interesting fact of her talk was that she had a poem written by a seventeen-year-old Czechoslovakian girl in which she asked "Will I be worthy of Canada?" "I will be worthy of Canada," she said. "I will be worthy of Canada," she said. "I will be worthy of Canada," she said.

In her finale she emphasized the first letters of our words, "Mother of Democracy" as she liked all of them. President Oster in extending a welcome to the large gathering stated that the year had proven a most satisfying one. He reviewed the events of the year. He mentioned the square dancing team, the Haldimand Juniors, the plowing team and the boys baseball championship at Guelph in June.

Mr. Kinneer complimented the young people on their accomplishments and told the large audience that Canadians should be proud of their country. We should count our blessings for we live in a world of peace and have every reason to be proud of it.

Dr. R. Charlton, M.P., James N. Allan, M.L.A. and Gordon Skinner, the Agricultural Representative, also presented their congratulations to the Juniors.

Ivan Bell, assistant Agricultural Representative, also presented his congratulations to the Juniors. The banquet was catered by the Ladies Orange Lodge of Simcoe Township who provided an excellent turkey dinner.
