Playing The Organ

The organ was my first orchestra. If you have never played the organ, you have never known the joy of feeling yourself music's master, sovereign of all the gamut of sounds and sonorities. Before those keyboards and pedals and the pa-lette of stops, I felt almost like a demigod, holding in my hands the reins that controlled the musical universe.

I played well enough to be able to take my father's place in church sometimes and this was my great joy. Walking along the river to St. William's, opening the little door to the organ with a big old key, looking over the day's hymns lest I forget the repeats, finding a prelude in a good key in order to avoid a difficult modulation, choosing a gay piece for a wedding . . . not falling asleep during the little in the pastor's favorite style, not playing a long recessional because it would annoy the sexton-all this filled me with pride. — From "I Am a Conductor," by Charles Munch.

CHRONICLES GINGER FARM

It's all over now. The Christmas tree stripped of its trimmings; the gay glass ornaments carefully wrapped and put away; strings of coloured lights, bereft of illumination, packed in their proper boxes. And the needle-dropping tree thrown on the woodpile or, in some cases, out with the garbage. Poor little tree . . . such a short while ago we joyously brought you into the house; decked your green branches with glittering baubles and then further enhanced the glitter by tiny elec-tric lights. You were very lovely, little tree, and served a good purpose so I hope you are not feeling too badly because your period of brightness was so brief. Yours was a short life but a gay one. In every home you were the symbol of goodwill and laughter. But now, with the New Year we must discard you as we pick up again the threads of ordinary, everyday life, car rying with us happy memorie

At Ginger Farm our letters and cards included greetings from readers of this column. love to get your messages of cheer and encouragement. Writ ing this column would be a lonesome sort of job were it not your letters coming friends. I love them, everyone. But during a special season like this, I hope you will forgive me if I reply through this column. Answering a lot of letters at one time seems to be more than I can

"Glencoe Reader" advises me to feed our cats a little flaxseed. Thank you for the tip "Glencoe"

it sounds like a good one. "Kenora" — you will know by now our little grandson is greatly improved. There were no cat-naps for him over Christmas. Sleep in the daytime? Not he - he might miss something! Thank you for all your kind inquiries and good wishes. We hope you will be feeling much better during the coming year. "Writer" - that was a grand letter. I have a feeling you have what it takes' and I am sure you always make a success of whatever you set out to do - writing or anything else. I don't think YOU need much advice from me. Once you are properly settled you should do well. I too, subscribed to Donaid French's magazine and found it very helpful.

"Mrs. F . . " So you are going to drive the family car. That seems like an excellent idea, especially if you make that visit you mention. Start driving now before you get any older and you will learn that much easier. "Irish" - your letter was most interesting. Your music, the old family home, and your cats and dogs, seem to provide you with a full and satisfying life. I am sure you never know what it is to be bored. Why should you? Living as we all do, in the most interesting and progressive period history has ever known, I cannot see why anyone, at any time, should suffer from boredom. I am sure that your talents, your active mind and hands, help you to forget to some extent, the pain you suffer with those aching

"Illinois" - your letter and greetings were very welcome. It was nice to hear from you again. Later on I will reply more fully. At the moment I am particularly busy. David expects to go to hospital again soon. This time for the removal of tonsils and adenoids.

The foregoing will, I hope, take care of replies to letters for the time being. But in addition to the letters I would also like to thank those who remembered us with greeting eards. It was so nice to get them and to know we have so many unseen friends. But I wonder what happened to our friend the mysterious "Mr. X.". was certainly looking for a card with his classic signature! Among our family letters was an "aerogramme" from Part-ner's brother in Australia. He was not expecting his sons home for Christmas as they were both in New Guinea. Jupiter's 'Pimples' Puts Scientists On The Spot

Messages from Mars? Now astronomers are wondering whether Jupiter, the largest and most massive planet of our solar system, is also signalling to us! This question has cropped up following a report by Dr. B. F. Burk, of the Carnegie Institute, Washington, D.C., who says he says picked up radio waves from Jupiter every three days for a month. Australian astro-nomers have made similar reof luminous gases on the planet was seen from the summit of the Jungfrau, in the Swiss Alps. It was then reported that the oval marking on Jupiter known as the Great Red Spot-which has been an astronomical mys-tery since it was first observed in 1664 was increasing in intensity. Sometimes the spot fades away altogether, but it always returns.

Minimum distance of Jupiter from the earth is 462 million miles. Before clocks were as reliable as they are now, eclipses on Jupiter's four moons gave scientists practically the only reliable method of determining use them in navigation for the same purpose, but failed. Scientists say it will be millions of years before Jupiter becomes as solid as our earth. Some think it is in a semi-liquid state and that its temperature i so high that life as we know it could not exist there. Others say that as Jupiter 483,900,000 miles from the Sun, compared with our 93,000,000, it must be so cold there that crust of ice many miles thick surrounds its molten kernel. Whatever the truth of all these theories, the outstanding mystery remains: what caused the radic waves which are puzzling the astronomers?

that the Outer Mongolia squab-ble in the United Nations was a neatly prepared Soviet trap. We blundered into that trap or, rather, permitted ourselves to be led into it by Chiang Kaishek. There is every reason to think that Russia had her alternative plan, whereby Japan was e cluded along with Outer Mongolia, well laid in advance. The net result of the exchange of vetoes is to leave Japan, alone of all major applicants, out in CAR HITS HOUSE - It's too bad that "No Parking" sign wasn't standing in this living room sooner. It might have discouraged a 20-year-old youth from plunging his car into the room. None of the four residents of the home were injured, but two walls were caved in and furniture was heavily damaged by the crash. The young driver tried to leave the scene of the accident on foot, but police caught him and arrested him.

It was Russia, to be sure, that vetoed the Japanese application -but in such a way as to dump much of the blame, in Japanese minds, on the United States. Russia had given ostentatious lip service to Japanese membership by agreeing to it in advance of the conclusion of a Russo-Japanese peace treaty. The final Soviet veto was com-pletely cynical; but Ambassador Lodge's charges of Soviet cynicism cannot hide from the Japanese the fact that it was the veto of Outer Mongolia by an American protege, Chiang Kai-shek, that started the chain of vetoes in motion. Obviously, Chiang had de-cided that UN membership for Communist China is inevitable, and had determined that the Nationalist regime would go out in a blaze of glory. But the method he chose amounted to a the cold and prey to Communist | a mere two-thirds of a penny a hole, whereas an English golfer expects to pay two or three times as much, and an American - well maybe fifty to a hundred times as much, writes Peter Lyne, London Parliamentary Correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor.

But things are different in Scotland. They not only have their traditional tight control over any needless extravagance with "bawbees" but they also regard golf as a part of daily living just as much as oatmeal and porridge. Therefore they say it should be cheap - if not actually free.

This particular parliamentary reporter has been acutely aware all his life of the prowess and tradition of Scottish golf. From the early days of boys' golf contests to the battle to gain a place on the Cambridge University golf team, there always seemed two more Scots in the way every time one Scot was removed. And now today in the more sedate competitions of the Par-liamentary Press Gallery Golf Society in London, one feels almost a foreigner if one talks with an English or Welsh or Irish accent. It's a virtual certainty one's next opponent is "Mac." The only question is: Which "Mac."?

So no wonder the Scots back home in Glasgow are fighting a grim rear-guard action for their right to keep golf as much a part of the present-day living as free schooling. Is it gol which has put so many Scots in top executive posts all over the world? No, not altogether. But it could be said that golf - and the way Scots apply themselve to it - has been quite a factor.

There may well be some protests against the assertion at the beginning of this story that Scotland gave golf to the world. Experts trace the origin of the game back to the Netherlands and the Dutch word "Kolf," meaning a club. But old pic-
