been given a "regional" appearance.
The cover illustration of the new book seen this week for the first time by Jarvis telephone users, features a drawing of the famous Bell Homestead at Tutelo Heights. The illustration is the work of Canadian artist, Lorne Bouchard, A. R.C.A. The Bell Homestead was originally named "Melville House," after the inventor's father and the elder brother, Melville James. The drawing replaces the figure of the "Spirit of Communication," which adorned the front cover of the local directory for many years.

The new telephone book contains 19 156 new and changed listings, accerding to D. A. McArthur, Bell Tele-Thone manager for this region "To avoid confusion and loss of time, the new book the moment they receive it, discarding the old director right away," he suggested.

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH

Today's Living is measured in Kilowatt-hours

"The smith a mighty man is he, with large and sinewy hands . . ." That's how Longfellow saw him, and how he was regarded by his community. Today, he doesn't have to be a physical giant, for the smith has a new kind of muscle. We can't describe it, for it's invisible. A unit we know as a "kilowatt-hour", muscle-power without an equal.

Today, the roar of the bellows and vibrant ring of the anvil are replaced by the hum of motors and the dull thud of the forging ham-mer. Electricity, accomplishing tasks thought impossible 50 years ago. And who can say what future applications will be developed?

Would you venture to estimate how much electricity will be used to power machinery in, say, 1975? Ontario Hydro endeavours to do that every day . . . look into the future . . . anticipate electric

Tomorrow's living as well as today's will more and more be measured in kilowatt-hours. It is the aim of Hydro to provide an adequate supply of electricity . . . so vital to Ontario's farms, homes
