NEW WING OF ROYAL YORK

The 17-storey wing of the Royal York Hotel now under construction is the inspiration for the house of blocks that five-year-old Cathie Stewart is building. Looking on are R. A. Mackie, right, general manager, Canadian Pacific Hotels, and Angus P. MacKinnon, manager of the Royal York Hotel. An artist's conception of the 400-room wing of the hotel, costing $10,000,000 and standing 17 storeys high, hangs in the background. The above incident took place during a recent convention of the Canadian Construction Association at the Royal York Hotel, attended by 1,200 delegates.

Mrs. Fleming convened the program giving a very interesting report of the annual Presbyterial W.M.S. held in Central Church, Hamilton, last week. Hymns were sung during the meeting which was closed by the repetition of the Lord's Prayer, after which a seasonable lunch was served by the hostess and committee.

One for the Provinces and the Municipalities to solve. However, Mr. Charlton was supported by Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg) who brought forth a positive decision of the House. This is exactly what happened.

Mr. Charlton sponsored his resolution because he felt that diesel and gasoline fumes were a definite menace to the health of the nation and he hoped that through the discussion of his proposal the House might create a general awareness of the air pollution peril. It was his view that there could be no doubt that diesel Misses Dog — Kills Child fumes were a factor in causing lung cancer, and he believed it likely there
