

ANNE HIRST

Your Family Counselor

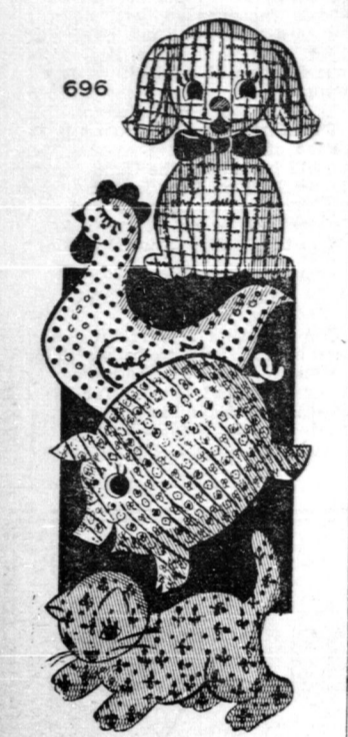

"Dear Anne Hirst! I am not asking you how to get this boy back — I don't think I want him. But I do want to know how a girl can tell whether a boy is just feeding her a line.

"I went steady with this boy for two weeks, which is more than I should do, but he declared he loved me and promised the moon and stars. . . Then suddenly it was over. He told me he just likes to date a girl eight or 10 times, and ditch her. I have learned since that this is true.

"Are all boys like that? Do they just string you along until someone new takes their fancy? A girl can't like somebody she is afraid to believe and trust. I am 17 but, honestly, I am just about fed up with boys.

DISGUSTED
 MALE BEASTS
 No, my friend, all boys are not like this one, but the species boasts a larger membership than one likes to admit. Full of conceit, they fill from one girl to another trying out various patterns to suit the favor, and they file reams with the same comment. "That was easy." They are out for experience with a capital E, and are not the least concerned with the state of a girl's heart as they say goodbye.

SOPHISTICATES — How residents of what is reputed to be the world's most sophisticated city, Mama and Papa Liana, who hail from Peru, introduce their new daughter to visitors of the Vincennes Zoo, Paris, France.

"You served this boy as Exhibit nine or 10 in his book. Let the fact be there — but use it to your own advantage. If you steady with a boy you've known two weeks is to set him on top of his world, flustering but foolish suggestion. Immediately you are cut off from any other dates automatically removed from circulation. If your next boss wants to go steady as soon as "Oh, I don't know you well enough," and let him work to win whatever laurels you find he deserves. That will put him on his toes, and you will rise on his list as one girl that has to be shown. To fall on his neck at the first demand would be to identify yourself as one whose favors are had for the asking. That isn't good enough for a girl like you."
 Boys like to date the girl that other boys admire. When they see her around with general circulation, they begin to wonder what secret attraction she has. Yes, every boy has a line. The smart girl lets him test it out, nibbles at it with reservations — but she doesn't swallow him. Only when he has shown he is dependable, considerate and someone she is proud to be seen with, is she ready to have a date.
 Even then he should be on trial.

SKIRTS DOUBLED — From Paris, France, comes this swimsuit with two skirts. Both ensembles, from the 1957 resort collection of Brigitte de Cannes, consists of a one-piece suit in white cotton, framed in bands of colorful print, with a matching skirt for town wear.

TRIAL HUSBAND
 Dear Anne Hirst: I wonder how many other wives dread paydays in their homes? My husband gets tight, and makes my life and our little son's a frightening thing. Apart from that, he spends more than we can afford, and I am so worried I don't know where to turn.

"My parents would take me and the boy in, but I keep on hoping that if I stay, my husband will behave himself. Perhaps I only hate to admit how hopeless I am; he never listens to anything I say, only resents it. Can you help me?"

SCARED MARY?
 What you need is the protection of the law. Your husband will not change because your pleas and tears; it takes a stronger will to handle him. So tell him now that next time he is so beastly, you will have him arrested — and you must mean it. He will shudder at the idea and swear it isn't necessary, but your threat may shock him into sanity. If it does not, go through with it for his sake as well as your own.
 Could you depend on him to support you and the boy if you left him? Practical angles must be considered, and in your case it would not be fair to thrust the whole burden on your parents. Perhaps a talk with the Domestic Relations Court is in order, but unless you are there will advise you as to the advantages and disadvantages of divorce and help you all they can.

Every girl wants to be popular, and the first step is to make sure a new acquaintance is worth her time. It isn't the number of boys she dates, it is the kind she is seen with. Practical angles must be considered, and in your case it would not be fair to thrust the whole burden on your parents. Perhaps a talk with the Domestic Relations Court is in order, but unless you are there will advise you as to the advantages and disadvantages of divorce and help you all they can.

Our intelligence agents have just unearthed news of the stinging man in town, and it's too electrifying to keep until next Christmas. He's the fellow who saves burned-out Christmas tree bulbs and lets his children peer through them on bright, sunny days to save expense of buying a string of bulbs which work.

Came Christmas Day . . . everyone here and everyone happy — except me. I was sure the dressing would be festive but the pudding a failure! But do you know they were both particularly good. So you see, I too, worry about the things that never happen.
 After dinner the Christmas Tree — and no one enjoyed it more than seven-months old Edward. He sat on the floor among the wrappings and boxes, cooing and chucking to himself. David, of course, was thrilled beyond measure. The grown-ups too were very well pleased and there were frequent exclamations of "Oh, look — just what I wanted!" Partner's present to me caused a good deal of amusement. It was a copper-bottom frying-pan! Apparently he was tired of hearing complaints about my old aluminum frying-pan to which everything stuck closer than hot butter. So that was one time when the squeaking wheel got some grease.
 Altogether it was a most enjoyable Christmas, particularly as the weather was perfect for travelling so we had no worries about the highway. Another thing — there was "ich a happy family feeling . . . ne

Annual Meeting of Shareholders The Royal Bank of Canada

James Muir questions if Canada developing her human resources as effectively as her natural resources

Present teachers' salaries make decent living standard impossible for those who train and mould character of youth. Effective control of inflation may not be possible without broader central bank powers.

CAN PRESENT CURBS HAILT INFLATION?
 "There are at least two sources" which the central bank, which the Royal Bank of Canada, in his address at the bank's annual meeting in Montreal on Thursday, January 10th, "is clear enough that the annual meeting in Montreal of our schools and universities and even of many of our churches are insufficient to maintain a decent living standards for the devoted men and women whose life work it is to train the mind and the moral character of our young people," said Mr. Muir. "In this we are failing to make the fullest and wisest use of our human resources; we are failing to give them a reward consistent with their worth or incentive; we are endangering therefore the future welfare of our whole economy."

CRISIS IN EDUCATION
 "The recent economic position of the teaching profession is an anomaly. The economic position of all teachers has deteriorated relative to other professions of comparable training and responsibility, and relative to the general economy. This is true in all countries and in all stages of economic development. The teacher today finds himself in the same occupational 'depressed area' which he occupied as long ago as 1776. With the present disparity between the salaries we pay our teachers, and the salaries of other professions, we cannot expect to recruit or to retain enough qualified men and women to maintain our present teaching standards in our schools and universities."
 "Here then is a case where the allocation of our human resources would seem to be unresponsive to the ordinary operation of the price mechanism. But this is only partly true. In fact, the supply of teachers is likely over a period of time to be only too responsive to the price mechanism; the market will work only too well and we shall lose much of what is best in our educational practice through the spread of too small a staff over too many classrooms and students, and through the deterioration of the staff itself."
 "We as citizens must, through general action, business, or individual action ensure that our schools and universities are provided with sources of funds sufficient to attract and to replenish those human resources of talent, training and experience that are so essential to our progress."

INFLATION STILL THREAT
 The continuing threat of inflationary pressure, some of them from new and unexpected quarters, was emphasized by Mr. Muir, who expressed the view that it might be necessary to enlarge the powers of the central bank if we were to keep under full control the forces which threatened the integrity of our money.
 "It is now nearly fourteen months since the Bank of Canada came to real grips with the problem," said Mr. Muir. "The battle is a stiff and continuing one, and victory has not yet been achieved. And in this battle, unrelenting selfishness is, perhaps, the most dangerous 'misguided missile' combating those who would confine and preserve the integrity of our money."
 "The Bank of Canada and the member of their respective families. Well, that concludes the story of our Christmas — nothing spectacular — just a quiet, family affair. Now we are looking forward to a visit from my nephew and nephew Klemi from Oshawa. After that it will be normal living again — at least, I hope there will be normal living.

I would like to think the tempo of life will be a little slower, but I suppose that is a futile hope. I am sometimes compelled to slow up whether a minute or ten minutes at a time. I saw an in-liner home from town 11 day to stop for red lights at a railway crossing. A very long freight train was pulling into the station, so long that when the first section was in the station the middle section blocked the crossing. And there it stayed. The time was 12:05 and employees of an in-liner got longer and longer and I could imagine the driver seething at the wheel. The train eventually went on its way — after nine or ten minutes — but I suppose that is a futile hope. I am sometimes compelled to slow up whether a minute or ten minutes at a time. I saw an in-liner home from town 11 day to stop

Total Deposits have now passed $3 1/4 billion mark

K. M. Sedgewick, General Manager, noted that not only had the assets of the Royal Bank reached the imposing total of $3,973,289,939 but that deposits had passed the $3 1/4 billion mark, both new high points in Canadian banking history. While our lending policy during the year was a restrictive one," said Mr. Sedgewick, "in line with the agreement with the Bank of Canada, yet the buoyancy of our economy demanded that we accommodate many deserving citizens with an increase in the amount of credit. For this reason, the commercial loans of the bank increased by $123,000,000 or just over 10%."

Mr. Sedgewick pointed out, continuing, that the bank's position, he pointed out, continued strong, total capital of $703,000,000 representing 57.86 per cent of the bank's liabilities to the public. Capital funds now stand at $187,000,000, or 14.2 per cent of approximately $1,320,000,000 in deposits. "In spite of lower balance in Government securities of some $45,000,000," said Mr. Sedgewick, "deposits of the bank increased by approximately $16,000,000. This figure compares with $10,838,488 in the previous year."

ROYAL BANK ABROAD
 "International banking on a broad scale has been a special characteristic of the bank for a long period," said Mr. Sedgewick. "It has long been our policy to select business carefully and, as a result, the asset position of our Non-Domestic branches continues at a high standard. For over ten years, a special section of the bank's Foreign Department has been devoted to the development of information necessary to those engaged in trade, and the permanent staff of this department is accordingly one of the most senior members of the bank's branches and Head Office." This, Mr. Sedgewick mentioned, makes the bank well equipped to render a specialized and essential service to clients and others engaged in foreign operations. He stressed that in an organization such as the Royal Bank, there are always worthwhile opportunities for young Canadians who have special aptitudes and are interested in a banking career abroad.

New Data Jolts Views About Mars

If there are living plants and animals on the red planet Mars, they seem to have made no attempt to show themselves to astronomers last fall when Mars swung closer to the earth than it has been for 32 years.

According to Carl Sagan of the Yerkes and McDonald Observatories of the University of Chicago, the "seeing" conditions for studying Mars were excellent. But none of the vivid greens and blues that have previously been reported during the height of the Martian spring, which were taken as evidence of some sort of plant growth, were observed. In a report delivered to the Society for the Study of Evolution at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science here in New York, Mr. Sagan explained that previous evidence for life on Mars was based on three types of observations.

First there have been seasonal color changes in dark areas on the Martian surface which coincided with the melting of the polar ice cap. Then there were seasonal erratic changes in the size of these dark areas. Finally, there has been the observed reappearance of the dark areas after being overlaid by what is thought to be sand or dust from a dust storm.

All of these phenomena have been taken to indicate some sort of plant growth. However, Mr. Sagan now says

Too Much Nagging Bad for Children
 The note from the school nurse read: "Linda J. in Grade 10 has started biting her nails again. She looks unhappy and depressed. I suspect her parents are pulling her too hard."
 Mrs. Edna's records showed she was the youngest of three girls. One older sister was a nurse, the other a high school teacher. Her father was an accountant; her mother had been a public school teacher. Despite her parents' and the school's best efforts, Linda's school progress had been average. However, she was not doing badly, since intelligence tests rated her as "dull normal."
 When Linda was interviewed in Grade 9, it had been noted she was average to please, but timid. She was an "over-achiever" — one who does better work than her mental ability would suggest she was capable of. Linda discovered she had made progress in school only by dint of exceptionally long hours of study.
 When I sent for Linda, her nails were bitten to the quick; her face bore a haggard, downcast expression. So anxious was she for help, she did not hesitate to discuss family relationships.
 Her parents had determined to provide each of the children with as good an education as their finances could stand. Linda, the older girl had lived up to expectations; the parents were justifiably proud of her success. Her mother hid her disappointment at Linda's relative lack of achievement. They kept urging her to study harder. And they were ashamed she attended vocational school, instead of a collegiate. Linda, unable to take any pride in her school accomplishments, felt guilty and rejected — because her parents expected too much of her exactly in her sister's footsteps.
 I thought of Edna, who knew that her father preferred her older sister. Linda, because she was prettier and more talented in music. Edna did not bite her fingernails. She vented her emotions through petty thievery, which landed her in a family court.
 Fortunately, Linda case had a happy ending. Her parents were not stupid. Led to realize they had been expecting too much, they relaxed the pressure. Her marks actually increased slightly. Linda stayed at school until she completed Grade 12, then went to work in an office. She is still not a quick or original thinker, but she is neat, painstaking, loyal. Her work is appreciated; she is happy.
 Not all children are as fortunate. Edna grew into a bitter, vindictive woman, looking on the world with a cold, hostile eye. Jimmy realizes now he should have stayed in school. Instead of dropping out in disappointment because his athletic ambitions failed.
 Children need the constant love and confidence of their parents. If the parents prefer one child to another, they fail to recognize that each child is an individual with his own strength and his own weaknesses. If they try to force their own standards of accomplishment on the child, the results may be disastrous.
 Linda's parents failed to appreciate their younger daughter's many excellent qualities of character, while expecting her to excel — academic sch-

WIDER POWERS NEEDED
 Despite the effective measures already taken, Mr. Muir felt that there were at least two sources of inflationary pressure which the Central Bank, with its present powers, would find it difficult to reach. "It would appear," concluded Mr. Muir, "that in order to be fair and achieve the best results, our monetary and credit controls may have to embrace a wider area of our financial world than it now does." The problems of Canada today, he said, were the natural problems of a growing country and of an economy that has great potentialities for growth and development.
 "Consumer credit continues to expand, but consumer credit directly or indirectly financed by banks fell off significantly in 1956. For example, personal loans by chartered banks fell off during the second half of the year, as similar loans by loan companies and credit unions continued in 1956. Retail consumer credit by instalment finance companies rose through 1956 to a new high, while chartered bank loans to instalment finance companies fell steadily during the second half of the year."
 "These favourable results, so far as chartered bank credit is concerned, were due to a monetary policy that kept the brakes on the expanding money supply, thereby allowing market rates of interest to rise with the increased demand for funds."
 "In addition to overall policy on money supply and money rates, the Bank of Canada con-
