William F. Cody—"Buffalo Bill"—earned his nickname as a result of a contract to supply buffalo meat to crews building the Kansas Pacific Railroad. Cody received $500.00 a month for supplying about 12 buffaloes daily. In 18 months he killed 4,280 of the animals.

For a good many years the ex-nervous editor of the Simcoe Record and the writer have had a standing bet on all Provincial and Federal elections. Ott. King, who is now an executive of some sort of Canada's largest weekly newspaper, puts his bet on the Grigs and we take our chances on the Tories. With things as they are in Ontario we have been getting our share of victories, and, of course, he has been wiping them out when the Federal balloting comes along. In any event the stakes are usually useful to both of us after the usual turmoil of an election under a newspaper office. The coming Federal election will give us a possible chance of moving ahead of him judging by reports from the Maritimes and the Gallup Poll of Ontario. But we're not one to take advantage and we will announce right now that if Otto wants to call off the bet that has been standing these many years we're willing to release him. After all it could be pretty expensive with the odds against him both ways.
