Restored Village Has Pioneer Look

Morrisburg, Ont.—An unusual village is taking shape a few miles east of the Lawrence River community, 21 miles east of Cornwall.

Upper Canada Village, the first restored village in Canada, is being built as a monument to the early days of the settlement of the province. It is located in the townships of Glengarry, Prescott and Grenville.

The village is being built on a site of 1,000 acres, and is being developed in stages. The first stage is the restoration of the village of Upper Canada, which was founded in 1784 by John Graves Simcoe.

The village is being built in a way that will allow it to be used as a museum, and as a place where people can learn about the early days of the settlement of the province.

QUEEN OF CANADA

During her visit to North America, the Queen has been presented in three capacities.

In Jamaica and Williamsburg, at ceremonies commemorating the arrival of the first English settlers in the New World, she was the Queen of the United Kingdom.

In New York, addressing the United Nations, she spoke as head of the British Commonwealth.

But in Canada, she was the Queen of Canada.
