course, it takes stability, courage, integrity and devotion to a cause to achieve this, but it can be done.

We suppose you'll be sending condolences to our mutual friend, Jimmy Sinclair. It was Jimmy who officially opened your new Post Office, wasn't it? Parliament will hardly seem the same without Jimmy. He added considerable colour to the debates. We heard him speaking in the House a couple of months ago when he was having a grand time chiding the Minister of Finance concerning the announced grants to the Provinces. Jimmy was trying to make a case out of the fact the Minister had said one thing one day and quite another a day or two later. He indicated the Minister couldn't add two and two and his supporters were having a great time thumping their desks when he brought this to the attention of the country through the pages of Hansard. We didn't believe him, of course, because we were quite confident the Minister of Finance was able to add two and two.

You may not agree with us Sam, but we think this lacing is a good thing for the Liberal party. I predict the party will now go back and make a fresh start and will eventually get up enough speed to take its traditional place in the affairs of the Nation. In the meantime we are in good hands and we will probably go on eating, sleeping and worrying, just as we have in the past, only now, but definitely, the shoe is on the other foot.

My Thanks To The People of Brant - Haldimand

I wish to extend my sincere thanks to all of you in the riding of Brant-Haldimand, who have given me such overwhelming support at the polls.

I would also like to express my deepest appreciation to all those who worked so unselfishly and tirelessly during the weeks preceding election day.

In response to the confidence you have shown in me by once again electing me as your representative in Ottawa, I re-affirm my pledge to work unceasingly in the interests of all the people of Brant-Haldimand.
