we do with a 20-year-old girl who is wasting her time with a boy 17? For a year she went to our local college; he is only a high-school sophomore. She refuses to date anyone else, and is with him far too often. She is Intelligent and has done some writing, but if he ever had an ambition in life we've yet to hear of it; I think 'crude' is the word for him. She admits she turns down other dates, saying she can't be bothered.

"She never has shown any interest in our home and its furniture, really she has used it more as a boarding-house. She was not active in sports nor too popular with girls, and those she es now she met in college; she never brings them home.

what patience you have. TEEN-AGER APPRECIATES "Dear Anne Hirst: Maybe I'm wrong, but it seems to me that lately your column has dealt more often than usual with probiems of girls and boys my age. As a teen-ager I am writing to say how much I appreciate your nterest in us.

"I'm a high-school junior, and it seems to me I have more problems than I ever had before. Your advice to us about dating; education, manners, etc., is just solid, and I have often followed it myself.

"Thank you for being interested in today's teenagers, and espe-cially for not talking down to us. MARY LOUISE"

When a high-school junior takes time out to write such * a pretty note you may be sure I am touched.

The teen years are vital in * the development of young * people; it is during this period that they learn to discrimin-* ate, to get along with others, * and do their part as a mem-* ber of their family group. * Their whole future depends on their success in maturing wisely, and every thinker and authority feels it is a priviledge to be of use.

In my opinion, the teenagers of today are much smarter than we of another generation were, and exercise their rights and privileges * judiciously, with taste and * perception. More power to you:

COUCHFUL OF BED ROOM - More room for living in small quarters is offered in this king-size sofa-bed. Folded together, it appears to be a conventional sofa. With seven-foot spring and mattress extended it becomes a bed with built-in comforts. Sofa's back lifts to reveal space for a radio, books and ash trays. Model Nancy Rutenberg didn's say how that plant near her shoulders is supposed to stay alive when bed is folded. Shown at a furniture mart, the sofa-bed is no gimmick It's in production.

LONG WAIT - Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Holmgrain, of Memphis, are especially proud of their baby, Jane Elizabeth. She's the first female child born to the Holmgrain family in two centuries, according to Holmgrain. His family history, duting back to its Swedish origin, shows no daughters in all that time.

the sound effects from the sudden breaking of a glassware frying-pan. It was on low heat on my electric stove yesterday morning and suddenly flew into a hundred pieces. Fortunately no one was hurt, neither of us being near the store at the time although we were both in the kitchen. I hate to think what would have happened if one of those glass splinters had come in contact with living flesh. Some of the splinters were about an inch long and razor-sharp. I had used that little frying-pan for years and why it should suddenly fly to pieces I don't know. Believe me, its replacement will be one of stainless steel. No more glass stoveware for me - not when our grandsons are so often in and out of the kitchen when I am getting meals. It was for-tunate, too, that neither Taffy nor Ditto happened to be around at the time. I wonder if anyone else has had a similar experi-

Well, that was one source of excitement last week. Another was of quite a different nature. It was a means of escape from Westerns! Partner likes Westerns, also boxing, wrestling, the Naked City and similar halfhour shows. There are plenty of other programmes that we both enjoy but for my money there s too much advertising with all the programmes and too little good music. Even the Firestone concert has taken on a certain amount of jazz. Of course there is always the radio to fall back on but somehow I seem to be out of touch with good radio programmes. So a record-player seemed to be the answer.

Funny thing, I find I can work better with a background of good music - and the evening seems to be the time for work that relaxes - sewing, knitting, writng, or reading a study-book. During the day there is little time for radio or television as we find almost as much to keep us occupied here as we did on the farm. Partner spends a lot of time sawing up logs for the

Cr-rash! Bang! Wham! That's | fireplace, which we use every night. One way and another we think we are quite busy - until we get a letter from one or other of our farmer friends and read of their work and worries - and then we're not quite so sure. We read of the loss of a pig with rhinitis; pullets that have gone into a moult; water for stock that has to be hauled from the nearest creek twice a week and either ice or deep snowdrifts to contend with. Of course we had to struggle in just that same way years ago. But when you are young you can take it. What worries me is to see people up in years doing these things. Everyone over sixty should have an opportunity to take it easy. Lugging milk-cans around or pushing a heavy wheelbarrow is no job for a man long past his prime. Of course you will say every man has to earn a living. True, but why not be satisfied with just that? Elderly people are likely to live longer and get some enjoyment out of life if they are content just to get by and not worry about making big money. It is possible for a couple to live in emi-retirement if they are content with a quiet, simple life. We did it for several years and thus avoided the sudden change lowed after we sold the farm. There are ways of making enough money to carry an aged couple along for a few years. Young married couples are always looking for good country lots on which to build — the sale
