Hullo, everybody, are you still yawning after being robbed of that hour's sleep with the clocks changed to Daylight saving time?

They had just nicely gone when Ross and Cedric came along— No good protesting now - the time to do it was six months ago. But no one thinks of it then, and so we go on year after year, some people liking the change, some dislike it, others just tolerate it. Oh, well ...

Well, it doesn't seem possible but we certainly need rain. Just imagine that, after all the snow, ice and near floods we experienced just a few short weeks ago. One night recently we had a thundershower but it didn't really amount to anything-not even enough rain to lay the dust. Seems as if we are never satis-fied with our weather, doesn't it? And yet I think even the weatherman will admit we have reason for complaint. However, there isn't much we can do about it except be prepared. "Prepared for what?" you ask. Bad Check Artists

Of all U.S. criminals, the professional bad-check artist is probably the most dapper. Between 25 and 40 years of age, he is apt to sport a lodge emblem or a respectable club's badge in the lapel of his conservative suit He is also likely to be highly intelligent. When 50 convicted check forgers were given IQ tests, 42 per cent scored higher than 110, which is the IQ of only 25 per cent of the general population. But he is also likely to be a man driven by a "deep-seated fection-using the little things that happen spontaneously when the camera is turning. A door sticking, for example, or when a match doesn't light on the first stroke. Or, most of all, two people talking at the same time. A director with courage will say, 'Print it. That's the truth.' It's this absence of the old artificiality that has matured both movies and movie audiences. "You can't fool audiences any more. Before, an ideal movie star was one who had the flawless face of a model in a collar advertisement. Fortunately the premium now is no longer on beauty but on truth. I'm one of many actors in the business now who don't have to go to the 'corrective' make-up department early each morning. I wear no makeup. In that way the lines and flaws in my face show on the screen. This is truth, and people want to see characters on screen who are real. "The medium has changed, and possibly that's why my career changed too. Hollywood is more and more a director's and writer's medium. The picture with the big-name star is no longer an assurance of success. It's now a team effort, and as an actor I've been fortunate to find my place, to fit better into the medium. My approach to making movies is simple as falling off a dolly. I read a script and if I can believe in the character and the story line, I do it. If I can't, I don't." Another big reason for Ford's current box-office dominance is that he has appeared recently in several good comedies, and there is no doubt that movie audiences hunger for fun these days. Glenn Ford comedies do particularly well. Why? Unlike the professional gagman movies, Ford interpolates credible subjectivity in all he does. As he explained it: "I don't play it as comedy but as serious drama. Once an actor thinks he's funny, he's lost the audience. If you examine carefully each of the comedies I've been in—'Teahouse of the August Moon,' 'Don't Go Near the Water,' 'Imitation General'-you'll find that though the movies are billed as comedies, the leading character is always confronted with a very serious situation. My new picture has the same sort of technique. Maybe that's my secret. world. However I have a hunch From NEWSWEEK. will eventually be straightened Lardner. It's interesting, but also disturbing, to note how quickly and noothly legend can replace his-y. There's a legend afoot today that Tommy Farr, from Tonypandy, Wales, gave Joe Louis a bad time in the prize ring one night in 1937, and was robbed of the decision in their heavyweight title fight. The other day, when Tommy was visiting here in the States, your correspondent was struck by the fact that practically everyone who was born ince-let's say-the Hoover Adinistration has come to accept this proposition as gospel. Mr. Farr did nothing to knock it down. To be frank with you, hadn't expected that he would. "I won't say that I beat Looey," m observed thoughtfully, when the point came up, "but it can't be said that Looey beat me."

Oh, yes, it can. The fight is clear in my memory. I put in with the officials, who gave Louis anywhere from eight to thirteen of the fifteen rounds. Joe had a tender right hand that night; so he used his left almost exclusive-, and turned Farr's face into what looked like $1.50 worth of mburger. When the fight was over. Tommy did not claim victory. That thought came to him later, through one of those curions sidelights of history that produce legends.

Few eyewitnesses believed Farr ad won. One of these was Clem McCarthy, who called the bout by radio, on a national network. lement was a peerless caller of horse races. Fight-calling was new to him. He liked the way at Farr charged into Louis's left hand face-first. He was satisfied that these tactics had won the fight for Farr-and so was his audience of 20 million souls. The call was Clem's last one for a while. Next day, when Uncle Mike Jacobs, the promoter, learned that there had been two fights. McCarthy's and the real one, he swallowed his synthetic teeth, turned the color of a dahlia, and stripped Clem of his epaulets. This action came too late to stem the tide of myth.

Twenty million radio fans handed the wrong story down to their children, so that today the Louis-Farr fight is firmly fixed in the list of famous fight legends, along

1-The legend that Jim Jeffries was drugged in his fight with Jack Johnson. (Don't worry, friends, I will not claim that I was there.)

2-The legend that Carpentier almost knocked out Dempsey with a right hand in the second round. (The motion pictures show that Dempsey took a half a step backward.) 3-The legend that Billy Conn would have beaten Louis in their arst fight if he hadn't with Hiled to knock Louis out. (I don't hink Conn was ahead, but the salient point is this: He had used up his speed and gone flatfooted, and had no choice but to punch and be punched.) Tom Farr now believes in the Louis-Farr legend, and, for my

as a journalist, covering the unpleasantness between Floyd Patterson and Brian London. He's a rarity among ex-athlete journalists, in that he uses his own words in print. They are a much higher class of words than the ones he used in the ring to Jim Braddock, Max Baer, Lou Nova, and Red Burman when he was trying, without great success, to push their teeth down their throats. To be exact historically, perhaps I should say that Joe Gould, his American manager, earned some of it for him. Mr. Gould adopted Farr after his loss to Braddock.
