ANNE HIRST your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: On my recent birthday, I to my own surprise, got engaged to a young man I'd known for years. His family and mine evidently had planned our future before I realized it. In their presence he gave me a beautiful diamond. I was speechless—and I'm asham-ed to confess that I have not yet found courage to oppose

"Why? Because for three years I've been in love with a man 10 years older whom I met in business. We have dated regularly, and when I am with him I am thrilled through and through; yet I am at peace. He has never spoken in terms of love until the other day, when I showed him my ring. He wished me happiness, and that was

"I could not bear it. I telephoned him and we met. Then he admitted he has always loved me, but hesitated to say so because he is older. He is a professional man, really a sophisticated person and earning a large income. Now he seems miserable too, and I am so confused I don't know what to do. "I am fond of my fiance, and hesitate to hurt him and our families. Do you think I could learn to love him? Or shall I break things off and tell my family why? IN A WHIRL"

· To test your feelings for * the older man, try to picture * him without a dollar to his * name. Suppose his profession * failed him, his investments diminish, and he grow bitter * at fate? Could you stick by * him, comfort him, count all * else well lost just to be by * his side? If you find that you * could not love him for himself alone, put him out of your mind today and forever. * But if you are wholeheartedly in love, then break your engagement.

The young man will get over t. His family would not want * him to marry a girl who * doesn't love him, and your parents will surely want, first your personal happiness. Whether anyone can consciously learn to love a man * is debatable. I hope you will * not go through with marriage * to your fiance unless you do * fall in love with him - and if * you renounce this other man that could happen. . . .

"Dear Anne Hirst: I and grand young man are very much in love and want to get married. I'm not of age, how

Talcum-Powder Tragedy In France

"I'll never forget the look in my little Claude's eyes," one mother said. "He was only a little thing then - 18 monthsbut he looked as if he wanted to tell me something. And all the time I just kept rubbing on more of that powder." The powder, as a court in Bordeaux heard last month in harrowing detail, was a babies' talcum powder called Baumol which pharmacist Jacques Caze nave mixed in 1-ton batches and sold for use on babies' diaper rash and other skin complaint until it was suddenly taken off the market in 1952. By then doctors were being driven frantic by a wave of infant mortalities that struck like a plague out of the Middle Ages. Symptoms were always the same: Violent rashes which refused to respond to treatment. And when mothers dabbed on Baumol the rashes got worse; in a few days the helpless child would die. Seventy-three babies died this way and at least 290 others were made desperately ill before investigations - which were made public for the first time last week - revealed that in 1951 Cazenave had mixed up two batches of powder in which arsenic was substituted for harmless zinc oxide. The French Government, after seven years of laboriously tracking down the parents of the dead children, accused Cazenave of "grave professional error." "I admit all my errors," the druggist replied. "I didn't have the time . . . to perform an analysis of the ingredients."

broken man, Cazenave sat forlornly in a courtroom packed with the parents who sprinkled their tots with "the talcum powder that kills." He is charged with "involuntary homicide" for which the maximum penalty is two years in prison. This is the same sentence now being served by French pharmacist George Feuillet who in 1957 was found guilty of manutacturing a poison-laden "cure" for pimples which killed 102 persons. - From NEWSWEEK.

Eight-Year-Olds Enjoy Geometry!

"I like arithmetic," said John Crabbe. "But I like geometry better." The statement was remarkable for the simple reason that John Crabbe is only 3 years old. Together with 3,000 second and third graders in the Palo Alto., Calif., area, John is studying rudimentary plane geometry -including the formation of figures and measurement of angles. What's more, he and his classmates are grasping the subject easily. Backed by a $32,000 Carnegie Corp. grant, the experiment is the brain child of two professors at nearby Stanford University, Dr. Patrick Suppes and Dr. Newton Hawley, authors of a 161-page textbook, "Geometry for Primary Grades." "We think it's possible to give them something that tenth graders don't have time to absorb," said Dr. Suppes recently. "A thorough intuitive feeling for geometry." The easy text-book problems also improve a child's reading comprehension. With some awe, one teacher reports that words like "quadrila-teral" are appearing in compo-sition — used correctly and spelled correctly.

Ross hasn't got his yet and the fifth pair is for a little neighbour boy. Incidentally I make the mitts, his mother pays me. 75¢ a pair and that goes towards my "talent money" for the W.I. Each member is supposed to earn money to the value of $2 or more and hand it in. That little scheme should swell the treasury quite a bit. There are no restrictions as to how the money shall be raised. It can be by baking, baby-sitting, knitting, needlework or by having a pay-tea or card party. Thought I would pass the idea along for what it is worth. Talent money isn't a new idea but ways of making it

Yes, it really looks as if we have finally come to the end of our warm weather. Now what a scramble there will be - on farms and in homes - to get all the odd jobs done before freeze-up. And you never know how soon it might come, judging by what is happening on the prairie right now. Imagine blizbards and blocked roads so early in the season. The poor dears. However, I am hoping there won't be too much loss from snow-covered grain. I remember we had that happen one year out west and we were able to thresh in early spring and the wheat was none the worse. It has been rough and windy here today, whipping the leaves from the ash trees and worrying the birds. Sparrows have been seeking shelter under our permanent awnings and dozens of little juncos have invaded the lawns and gardens. Such, dainty. pretty little birds. With this sudden change in

Jerry and Eddie were up against the lovely job of rescuing contrary pullets and roosters from the tree-tops. Even though you provide the birds with the best possible accommodation some will escape from custody and take to the trees. Catching them is as hard a job as any on the farm. A quick grab for a chicken's legs -and if you miss it flutters to the ground and then runs squawking into the garden or among the shrubs. There is nothing more stupid than a frightened chicken. Chasing it with a flashlight is a waste of time - unless you can throw a sack over it or chase it into the corner of a building and then make a grab for it in the dark. Dear farmer-friends, I sincerely hope you don't have too many heaven help us if we were guilty of a little criticism of either. Another type of letter I know of is a sort of family chainletter. It begins with Mabel who writes all the news relating to the old hometown community. She sends the latter to Katie. K. adds her bit and forwards it to Betty. And so it goes until it has reached each of the sevenmember family and is then returned to the one who started it. Maybe that is a better idea than the duplicate letter. In this case the letter comes in a sealed envelope and has all the intimate details one is accustomed to in a family letter. But neither a chain nor a circular letter is as good as a personal letter. Either, of course, is better than no letter at all. Another way is to write a column such as this. I wonder how many hundreds of people I write to each week - and from whom I get a surprising number of heart-warming replies. Keep it up, dear people. I love your letters.

Why Women Live Longer Than Men

While American men ogle the opulent curves of a Monroe or Bardot, American women have been getting thinner. While American women sigh over the hard lean frames of Hudson and Holden, their own men have been growing fat. In fact, the average 25-year-old American woman today weighs a good 5 pounds less than her mother did 30 years ago, but the average American man of 25 weighs about 5 pounds more than his father at the same age.

That was what the Society of Actuaries, which has a way with figures, reported last month. In an attempt to find out why people die before insurance companies think they should, the society compiled the weights, heights, and causes of death for nearly 5 million Americans who have died in the past twenty years. The massive report-the biggest statistical study to date in the health field - confirms what the insurance men thought all along: Fat Americans are poor insurance risks because they are more likely to die of diabetes, digestive disorders, and heart disease.

The last such study was made

How Can I? by Roberta Lee

Q. How can I remove spots from white felt skirts and hats? A. White felt can be cleaned very nicely just by rubbing it gently with fine sandpaper or the smooth side of an emery board.

Q. How can I renovate rubber boots or shoes that have become hardened from wetting? A. You can give them a new look by rubbing them with a sponge that has been dipped into very warm castor oil. Q. What is a simple and easy way to add life to razor blades? A. Lay your blade on the inside edge of a glass tumbler and, pressing gently down on it with your forefinger, rub it back and forth for a few times against the cutting edges. This works very well for rehoning the edges of the blades to shaving sharpness.
