Anyone who has bowled with Doc Austin knows how lucky he is. But, who could have imagined luck would ride with him to the point of getting two deer on his recent hunting expedition. It might be explained by the old adage a blind porker gets an occasional acorn. We'd be more inclined to believe that Allan Lundy and Bruce Meehan got together and drove them right up into Doc's gun sights. From past experience we know what is going to happen now. For the next six weeks instead of shooting deer he'll be shooting the bull in copious quantities. The only way we'll forgive him is if he will put on a Venison Banquet in the Community Hall and invite everyone to attend. Come to think of it he might just do that and charge a fee. Anything to get back his hunting expenses.

Andy Johnson's automatic pin-setters were working perfectly in his new bowling alley on opening day. The amazing accuracy of the complicated machines is alone worth a trip to the new recreational center. With league activity getting underway this week we expect the new alleys will be the mecca for bowling enthusiasts until the warmth of next summer begins to appear. Certainly for anyone interested in this game no finer facilities could be desired.

We happened to look at the Calendar this morning and you won't believe it but only five weeks remain until Christmas. If you notice when Christmas comes this year and think about it just a minute or two you will realize what a hassle it is going to be. Christmas comes on Friday. Everyone knows that no one works the day before Christmas except farmers and people who live in small villages like Jarvis. Even in Jarvis the Bank closes on all the holidays. So in the week in which Christmas falls we find there will be three working days and out of this will come the Christmas office parties and such. Then, the following week it is likely many will take the first day as Boxing Day to be followed by New Years on the Friday. Just imagine the enormous unproductive labour loss to the Nation at this period of the year.

Speaking of holidays we might as well get in our two cents worth on this school holiday on Armistice Day. The trouble in a Democracy is that we are not alert enough to our responsibilities to avert these consensical notions that are promoted by some person or persons who see a personal advantage. Every school age child should be in school on Armistice Day and, if nothing else, they should be taught the significance of the Day. Another thing. On what grounds do school teachers justify the cancellation of classes to hold Union meetings? Is there a deduction from their pay for this privilege? If this question is an injustice to our teachers we'd welcome an explanation and will be quick to tender our apologies.

Daddy's voice... It's the first of many warm and wonderful moments in store for Susie: moments that will come to her, by telephone, her whole life through.

The lives of all of us are constantly enriched by hearing the voices of our children, our parents, our friends — loved ones who may be out of sight or far away but are never out of reach by telephone. The telephone keeps us in touch with them all—giving us so much for so little.

Government Help Not The Answer - - -

Evidence of the decline of Canadian agriculture as a self-supporting, self-respecting industry is to be found, not in the declining living standards of the farmers, but in their increasing dependence on government help rather than on their own industry and enterprise.

More and more the farm organizations are leading their followers to believe that Government can be the giver of all good things, and can be the giver of all good things, and can free them from all responsibility for their own welfare.

Only a few months ago the Dominion Government gave the western grain growers several million dollars of the taxpayers' money as a free gift, obstensibly to compensate them for a poor crop and more than average difficulty in selling it. But even while the money was being paid, the farmers were discovering that the crop was not so bad after all and that the quality of their wheat was so high that there was a demand for it in spite of the giveaway marketing policy of the U. S. Government.

If we accept Dr. Johnson's definition of gratitude as "a lively appreciation of favors to come", we will have to admit that the western farmers are grateful to the Government for that gift.

They are showing their gratitude by the energy and the thoroughness with which they are organizing a mass crusade to Ottawa this winter to explain their utter dependance on more and bigger gifts from the same source, as the only means of assuring them of the prosperity which they now consider their birthright.

The petition which they intend to present to the Government asks for deficiency payments on wheat, oats and barley sufficient to bring the grower's incomes up to parity with the incomes of city dwellers. They want these payments made retroactive to the crop year 1955-56 and they want them to be increased year by year as their operating costs increase.

In other words, they want the Government to guarantee them profitable prices for their grain, no matter how much it costs them to grow it. When the farm organizations made a similar request last fall, the Prime Minister told them that such payments would create more problems than they would solve. It now looks as if this proposed crusade is being organized to convince the Government that to refuse their request might create more political problems for the Government than it would solve.

The practice of running to the Government for succor every time they find themselves in difficulties is becoming a habit, and is undermining the independence of the farmers. It is in keeping with the policy of the Fabian Socialists laid down by Sidney Webb, as the only means of making the people vote socialist.

He said: "The word socialism must never be used, but the people must be taught to look to the Government for everything, and to depend on it to solve all their problems."

Whether they know it or not, the farm organizations in Canada are leading the farmers into state socialism that will end in depriving them of all control over their own business and of the ownership of the land they clutivate.

The farm movement took the wrong turn when it abandoned the principle of "Equal rights to all—special privileges to none" and frankly adopted the policy of special privileges for themselves.

The experience of the last three decades should teach both farmers and governments that agricultural prosperity cannot be based on arbitrary controls of markets or of prices, or on grants from the public treasury. The only sure foundation for such prosperity must rest on the farmer's ability to produce the crops the consumers want and at prices the consumers can pay.

And the only means we have of knowing the consumers' needs and his ability to pay, is the open market where every man is free to buy what he can afford, and to reject what he considers to be beyond his means.

FIRE DAMAGES NANTICOKE HOME

Fire broke out in the home of Gerald Donaldson, near Nanticoke, on Saturday evening resulting in considerable damage from smoke and water.

Mrs. Donaldson discovered the fire in a bedroom closet. She called Gordon Hedges, who had retired in another bedroom and by the time he was able to get a pail of water he was hampered by the excessive smoke. The Jarvis Fire Department responded to the call and was finally able to quell the outbreak.

The cause of the fire remains a mystery. The outbreak was in a clothes closet with no electrical wiring in the area.

CHRISTMAS SEALS IN THE MAIL

The familiar Christmas Seals have been mailed locally this week and the committee is hoping for a good response to this appeal.

The money received from the sale of Christmas Seals finances the care and, more particularly, the preventative program in controlling tuberculosis.

Too often we set aside the package of Christmas Seals and forget to send in the contribution. Won't you please attend to this at once and help in this worthy cause.

The seals are most useful at Christmas time and in order to obtain the same value at a store it would probably cost $2.00. Why not consider the value and contribute accordingly

IN THE ORBIT OF OUR EYE !

By C. D. CLARKE

TROPHIES ARE WHERE YOU FIND THEM:

Along about my twenties I began collecting, as indeed most of us do, trophies! So, people collect autographs! Some collect milk jugs, mostly the kind you get in restaurants when on vacation. Others collect decals...you know, those transfers that they plaster on car windows, saying such things as "Silver Bay", "Algonquin Park," etc. etc. I collect ash trays and insignia! Mostly ash trays! In fact, if it were not for that word ensignia, there would be no column to-day!

I garnered my first ash tray when in the RCAF at Jarvis. Simpsons had done the interior decor in the Airmen's Canteen at Jarvis, and, among other things had placed a dozen or so elaborate ash trays about the lounge. Those ash trays, standing about 36 inches high, were a constant challenge to my wife. I wanted one in my quarters. So I moved one carefully to my chair by the door and waited the arrival of the orderly officer. When he, and the orderly sergeant made their grand entrance, to the chant of "Orderly Officer," from the sergeant, and everybody stood up, I quickly placed the ash stand along side me, did a smart about-face and marched out ash stand and all! From then on I became an addict. I think I have over...well, quite a lot of ash trays anyway. One I took from the waiting room (expectant father's, that is) of the Maternity Hospital in Hamilton. Think what a lot of butts must have been ground into that tray! Even now, when I have the need to use that particular ash receptacle, I'm reminded of the thousands of fathers who must have used it and, possibly never knew they did! It's thought provoking eh? Well, last year, Gerry Marcoux and his wife asked Irene and I to visit one of the many fall fairs that were in progress, and so we sallied forth! There were many fine exhibits to see and enjoy. But one, right in the middle of the mid-way, was a scale-set-up of the highway improvements that were to be done in that particular county that year. It was a beautiful lay-out. And, backing the whole display was a golden shield of the county's coat-of-arms! An elaborate affair of some 36 inches in size Gerry pointed the crest out to me and said "Now there is something to place behind your collection of ash trays." And, before anyone could catch a breath, he had bounded over the rail of the exhibit, carried it to the front and placed it in my arms!

With hundreds of people looking on, I stood appalled. "Now", he hissed, "Mr. Collector, let's see you get away with this!" And he turned, and collecting my wife and his on his arms, made his way down the mid-way and left me standing there like a nincompoop with the county coat-of-arms in my hands! It seemed right then, that every second person was an official or a constable! What to do? Could I vault the rail and put it back, after just having had it handed to me. No, of course not! That would invite suspicion! The only thing to do was to carry it to the gate, and this I did. But on arrival at the gate, what did I see but two tall Police standing guard! Now this gave me pause! How in heck could I pass by them with the County's cherished escutcheon in my grimy hands? It was impossible! So back through the midway I went, with sweat breaking over my brow, and my burden becoming more heavy and more brilliant with each step. I felt like a neon tube display on feet! Then I had a happy thought. Back to the main gate I went. There were the constables, and there too was Gerry, a smile of supreme contempt on his face! Up to the constables I marched. "Where", I demanded in my best 'I've got a job to do voice' "is the Manager's office?" "Right over there sir", stated one stalwart guardian of the peace! And he pointed to a tent door close by. So I lugged the shield over to the tent door, opened the flap, and shouted, as loud as possible "I'm taking the shield, good night all!" Everyone in the tent looked up and chorused "Good night!" Then I smiled to the two constables and they both saluted me cheerfully as I marched sedately to my car. The shield makes a nice back drop for my ash trays but seriously I think this fall, when the county has its fair, I'm going to take their crest back. After all their motto, which incorporates the words, (well I just can't put them in print) are a constant source of worry to me and a reflection on my ash tray collection. In fact, I'm even thinking of taking back the ash trays to their owners and calling my hobby off! I'd say "I'm cured!"
