Sorrow ...break the heart and cause detours in our journey. Sickness and affliction, set-backs that 'slow the pace' and sometimes mean following an alternate route. How can we face these things, if our preparation has been inadequate?

Thousands to-day are finding life superficially satisfying, but deep within are aware that the journey is not the great adventure and experience they had anticipated. When emergencies arise, then they discover how inadequate have been their preparations. It was because men had taken the 'wrong roads' and were unable to surmount the obstacles and trials of the journey, that God sent His Son into the world, to redirect such 'pilgrims' as would accept his help. "I am the way, the truth and the life," said Jesus. He is the way by which alone we can determine the real truth about ourselves, our purpose and our life.

Many of us are trying to travel the road with a faith that has not been overhauled since childhood, with principles that have become worn and thin through compromise with our environment. Abandoning prayer and worship, life is no longer refreshed by the Spirit of God and in life's crises we discover that we have not the 'reserve power' to see us through.

To adapt a modern advertisement many of us are travelling "with a religion that is unfit for use." Now is the time to have a 'check-up' and be prepared for the journey ahead.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

DEAR EDITOR:

At the risk of being considered ridiculous, I would like to reply to the letters by "Willie's wife", "Willie's brother", and "Willie's two friends" in a recent issue of the Jarvis Record, not because I object to being classed with Khrushchev, not to apologize to a few of your readers for taking advantage of their not having dictionaries, but to point out certain incongruities in their arguments and provide a few facts for those who might want to know.

"Willie's" wife complains that my previous letter was too personal. May I suggest to her, and to anyone

Reporting from The Far East

—By Diane Miller—

THE THEATRE

For the past month the Leningrad Ballet has been performing at the Takarazuka Theatre, the home of the Takarazuka dance group which you might have seen in the movie "Sayonara". The Takarazuka dancers are at present in their other theatre in Kobe so guest artists from all parts of the world can be seen here during the summer.

Yesterday afternoon we went to see Swan Lake. Most of the people there were naturally Japanese with the exception of the Russian dancers The Japanese are very interested in the theatre and particularly in ballet. They bring their children with them and each individual is most enthusiastic as they give the performers standing ovations and throw flowers on the stage at the conclusion of each act. The ballet itself was delightful as was the Tokyo Symphony Orchestra which was composed of Japanese musicians. Only the first violinist and the conductor were Russian.

The most interesting part of this afternoon was the theatre itself. When you enter you feel as if you are going into a baseball stadium. Everyone is crowding through one small door and rapidly climbing the stairs to get to a seat at the last minute. Being small the Japanese people need very little leg room so we were cramped for three hours In the lobbies on each floor you can buy soda pop, sandwiches, candy and binoculars. If you are hungry you can eat during any of the three twenty to thirty minute intermissions in a restaurant outside the balcony.

Seated next to us were three women with their children. Since they only had three seats the little girls sat on their mothers' knees throughout the performance. Seeing them together made us realize even more how very good the Japanese people are to their children. The children are always happy and smiling but never talk back to their parents. They are given every comfort and treat and yet are completely unspoiled.

Yesterday these little girls sat very quietly and only clapped their fat hands when something delighted them on stage. They were completely quiet and sat still with the result that no discipline had to be used.

The most amusing part was to watch these people eating. Before coming to the theatre they buy all sorts of sweets and their supper. At each intermission they pull out a new package containing some nourishment. The first intermission they had peanuts and candy; the second intermission, ice-cream sandwiches and the third, a wooden carton filled with rice cakes, raw fish, seaweed and pickles. This was their supper which they proceeded to eat with chopsticks.

By the end of the ballet we too came to the conclusion that the only thing to do for these long performances is to bring food. Watching the people around you eat is rather hard on the stomach so to avoid hunger pangs we shall likely adopt this custom too.
