Poison Control Centres have been established across Canada with information on first aid and treatment to be used in cases of poisoning. Since farmers are frequently using chemicals that are poisonous particularly sprays of one kind or another the services to be made is fast approaching. In the case of the one, the treatment is in the form of a capsul or 'bolus' which is administered to the animal and which controls the grub before it ever reaches the back. In most cases, it would seem to be wise to obtain the services of a veteriarian to give the treatment as he will be thoroughly familiar with the proper method of procedure. The target will be Bishop Hener Wilkinson.
