To Stop Arthritis

November 15th is "blitz" day set by the Ontario Division of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society for its $500,000 fund-raising campaign to STOP arthritis "in our time".

The campaign will be conducted in selected areas of the pro-vince in which the Society is not already participating in Com-munity Chest or similar drives. Major-General Chris Vokes, one of Canada's most distinguished soldiers in World War II, is Campaign Chairman.

General Vokes stresses the great need for an intensified fight to STOP arthritis and outlined the objectives of the cam-he stated "indicated that arthri tic and rheumatic diseases totally disable 50,000 Canadians and partially disable a further 115,-000. This results in an annual loss of 9,000,000 man days of work, well over $75,000,000 in wages. The loss to the Canadian economy is incalculable. In the words of Dr. Wallace Graham, Director of the recently opened University of Toronto Rheumatic Diseases Unit "These disor ders are among the leading causes of suffering and economic hardship known to man" The immediate aims of the Society are threefold. First-By 1960 to extend operations into at least 109 additional Ontario communities with a population of 3,550,576. At present there are 14 branches of the Society in Ontario, mainly in the bigger centres, which serve 26 mities with a total population of 2,429,139. Second-To intensify search for the cause and cure of the theumatic diseases through increased research activities; and Third-To establish specialized units in certain hospitals for in-patient care of selected patlents presenting difficult prob lems of diagnosis and treatment. A very important feature of the above is that patients from any part of the province will be eligible for admission. It is esnated that such units will cos the Society $1,000.00 per bed per annum to provide for selection machinery and the specialized diagnostic, therapeutic, and research facilities over and above the standard ward care available through Government Hos-

Further to the above it is planned to expand existing physiotherapy and social services now maintained by the Society to serve home-bound patients. This expansion will occur as and when qualified profession sonnel become available, and will be extended to communities not now served.

eround here. Last week we spent day afternoon the Juniors arconsiderable time listening to speeches from the United Naions General Assembly. Listening to Khrushchev was time wasted. But President Eisenhower's speech I wouldn't have missed for anything. Never before has he delivered such a forceful, inspiring address. There have been times when we felt he was lacking in leadership but not last week. He seemed full of vigor and purposefulness. It looks as if he may yet terminate his official duties in a blaze of glory. And then what? Who will be the next president and what will be the U.S. foreign policy under his guidance? Only ime will show. Well, sandwiched in between International affairs came our own little problems. We had to have an electrician in to do a bit of extra wiring. Have you noticed, no matter how well a house is wired by the original owner, outlets never seem to be in the right place to suit the next owner. Our only outlet in the hall was from overhead lights which were far too bright if we wanted to take a peek at sleeping visiting grandsons. So. we had an outlet put in near the floor Now we can plug in a nightlight that will give enough light without waking young sleepers. We also had a plumbe in to give us an estimate on a new eavestroughing job. Before that Partner had undertaken a little plumbing himself. Water from the kitchen sink wasn't getting away faster enough so had to be disconnected and cleaned. Unfortunately Partner hadn't got a rod long enough to do the job so we had to get a plumber to finish it after all.

Then one night Art phoned to ask if we would like some good, hard maple for our fireplace. A tree had to be removed from their front lawn as roots were interfering with the sewerage system. Well, of course Partner couldn't say no to an offer like that. So, in due time the wood arrived, in three foot lengths and various thicknesses. Art brought out several loads in the trunk of his car. Each succeeding day Partner got to work splitting the logs. Now he has a lame back as a result. Anyone who has tried splitting hard green maple will understand

We also had two unexpected jobs. One was baby-sitting for a young neighbour couple until two-thirty in the morning! And I had a pheasant to cook Is this open season for pheasants? I wouldn't know. Apparently the pheasant didn't know either. Anyway it mets its death, in broad daylight, by flying slap-bang into the windshield of a neighbour's car. It was near his home so he promptly bled, plucked and cleaned it. Then his wife felt so sorry the bird had met death in such a strange way that she didn't want to eat it. So her husband brought it over to me. And that is how we came to have roast pheasant for Sunday dinner. It was a little too fresh to be as tender as it should have been but still it was tasty. It was a lovely bird - a cock pheasant - with more meat on its breast than a threepound chicken. Saturday was the day of Milton Fair. We wanted to go but didn't make it. It was so hot and we were tired. The Seniors were here Friday night (that is, Dee, Art and their three boys),

The Queen's wedding, when she was Princess Elizabeth, was ruled by austerity in contrast with expenses cut to a minimum. In November, 1947, Britain was still a rationed country, suffering greatly from wartime shortages. The banners and decorative flags which had hung in the Mall were offered on permanent loan to the regiments of which the young Princess was Colonel-in-Chief.

Thus today, these romantic banners with their yellow and white background and wine coloured cartouche centres, bearing the cipher EP between a coronet and Tudor rose, are greatly treasured in Canada by the 48th Highlanders and Le Régiment de la Chaudière, and in South Africa by the Royal Durban Light Infantry and the Railways and Harbours Brigade. Giant Tortoises May Be Wiped Out

Among the world's oldest in habitants, tortoises watched the rise and fall of the mighty dinosaurs, and survived the hazards of countless millions of

Most of the animals that shared the world with them in their early years have long since disappeared, as have many that came in much later times. Civilized man, however, seems set to succeed where the forces of nature have failed. At his hands the giant tortoise has been reduced from a state of astonishing abundance to that of precious rarity. For the tortoise it was an unfortunate day in 1535 when a Spanish explorer, Fray Tomas de Berlanga, discovered a group of islands in the Pacific some 700 miles west of Ecuador, for these islands were the reptiles homes. The islands themselves, of volcanic origin, were inhospitable.

There was little water and only cacti and parched, stunted shrubs lived on the almost bare rocky land. There was, however, one impressive feature about them. They carried enormous populations of gigantic tortoises. And so Berlanga named them the Galapagos Islands galapagos being the Spanish word for tortolse.

It was not long after this that someone discovered that the tor-Ships sailing the Pacific took to calling at the islands to pick up some fresh meat. One sixteenth century seafarer reported: "They are extraordinarily call at the Galapagos Islands to provision, tells us that "in four days we had as many on board as would weigh about fourteen tons. They were piled up on the quarter-deck for a few days with an awning spread over to shield them from the sun, which renders them very restless, in order that they might have time to discharge the contents of their stomachs; after which they were stowed away below as you would stow any other provisions, and used as occasion re-
