THIS WEEK I thought you might be interested in reading about some of the things length kimono underneath which must be very ne sees in Japan. To the Japanese there is nothng unusual in what they are doing but to the yes of a foreigner their actions and mannerisms

Every day as I come home to lunch, through he roaring traffic, I see men on bicycles manreets. This may seem quite normal but as they teer with one hand they balance tray after tray food with their other hand. They are delivering lunches to customers. They are so skilled at oing this that they never spill a drop in spite the fact they are side-swiped by cars, buses of the automobiles are very small. One of the strangest vehicles is a three-wheeled truck which is steered by a stick. The cars are polished o a sheen by feather dusters and in the back windows there are sheer curtains to keep out the sun. Most of the cars are chauffeur driven. There are three different colours for license our sight will be lengthened and plates - a white one for a privately owned vehibikes, bicycles and sometimes a rickshaw in they haven't adopted the western styles. They scarcely breathe. The men and women all wear ghetas or wooden shoes and the sound of their vated by two bars of wood so that you rock them. You merely slip your toe into a thong fle and clop on the cobbled pavement and sidewalks. These shoes are most practical because women's western heels are always getting caught between the cobbles.

Rather than carry bags of groceries and boxes the Japanese people bundle their parcels together and wrap them in a square cloth of silk called a "furoshiki". They tie the opposite corners of the square together around their boxes and carry their bundle by the knot so tied.

The most beautiful Japanese women are white skinned. As a result they avoid the sum mer sun as much as possible by carrying sun mer umbrellas. Too, they don't like grey hair so many women have their hair dyed to prevent being grey. The women are all very young looking as are the men. It is difficult to determine their age but when they become old they age more rapidly than we do. Their figures are very trim and muscular with the result that you see very few fat people. The women are very slight,
