REPORTING FROM THE FAR EAST A SUNDAY AFTERNOON

IT SEEMS that the most memorable days in Japan are those which are spent with Japanese friends and the most recent was a Sunday afternoon in Tokyo.

Like any typical winter day in Tokyo the sun was shining brightly as we set out for the Ginza (downtown Tokyo) by city bus.

Our first stop was a Chinese tea room called the Yie-Lai-Shian. From the outside, this building looks like a pagoda.

Here again is a difference as you pay on entering many restaurants in Japan rather than on leaving.

All in all it was a most educational afternoon and provided me with an opportunity to learn more about Tokyo, about Japanese customs and art.
