

We have been taken to task for the impression we left concerning camping in a park we visited recently. Our informant tells us that the overnight camping facilities from Jarvis to the East Coast are out of this world and should please the most discriminating traveller. His description of the camps, however, was far different than what we saw when the tents were piled almost on top of another. So, we'll have to retract the impression that camping facilities leave something to be desired.

After travelling about twenty miles through a bush trail such a place can be found but more time than a week-end holiday is required to fulfill such a plan.

Everyone is aware of the limited lake frontage available these days along the north shore of Lake Erie. Practically every building lot has been sold to accommodate city people who are seeking a change from city life. This influx of summer people over the past few years has brought a considerable change in the mercantile activity of stores servicing the needs of these people. Many such stores now find their daily sales exceeding their weekly sales of a couple of decades ago.

Not many people read the Port Dover Maple Leaf, but those who do perhaps, read with perplexity the Editor's of The Jarvis Record last week. The title of the article was "CROSSROADS EDITOR IS PURVEYER OF PEANUTS". Some reference was made to the fact we were out selling peanuts, on behalf of the Jarvis Lions Club, the previous week but, in the main, the article tries to convince the Maple Leaf readers that a financial predicament exists in Canada just as it gave out erroneous information prior to the last election.

We have always suspected that comic books were many's standard of literature and now we know it. It is obvious he never reads the financial pages of the newspapers or he would appreciate more fully the buoyant state of the Canadian economy. Bountiful reports of progress in their annual statements and, instead, he is saying they never had it so good. And a couple of days ago, we read where The Steel Co. of Canada had a cost of millions of dollars to enable them to supply and maintain big enough for air-mobile stampings.

Al Cherny, featured fiddler on CBC-TV's Friday evening Country Hoodoo series, shows some of the form that belted him into the open and novelty fiddling titles the past two years at the Old Time Fiddlers' Contest in Shelburne, Ont. Cherny still uses a fiddle given to him as a child by his father.
