SEEN ON MAIN STREET
Main Street of Jarvis holds his court in the Beauty Salon and there he rules over a devoted bery on female courtiers. There is one peculiar custom observed in this court. The ladies who make it up must all wear a peculiar head-dress. This is a fantastic creation of metal which is somehow woven into the hair, over which they don a fearsome looking helmet. Every one who attends his court must wear one. Perhaps I should add that those who attend and respect their respects to the Prince both look and feel better when they go out.
Two other, very ordinary, dogs live on the north end of Main Street. They are Yappy King. They are great friends and love to play together. They also have their own devoted to their young master, who returns his affection, but is suspicious of other human beings. He has a rather forbidding appearance, is at heart a most friendly dog and returns any notice you give him with a peculiar crooning which sounds rather like a solo instrumental.
Finally, we come to the arctic old maid who lives in an upstairs apartment. She is not very sociable with the other dogs, in fact she ignores them. However, she is particularly friendly to small children, especially if they are small children. She is very friendly to the other dogs, in fact she ignores them.
