get information about Windfalls new properties from George and Viola MacMillan, the principals in Windfall and several other mining companies.

When he asked them about their assay results, he testified they laughed and told him to read the verses of Rudyard Kipling's "If" beginning:

If you can make a heap of all your winnings, And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss, —

Don McKinnon, one of a three man prospecting syndicate which sold 12 claims to Windfall for $100,000 said Texas Gulf had wanted them and mistakenly staked a different area. He and his partners then staked the area and sold it to George MacMillan when they found out he wanted it.

MacMillan is a 51-year-old prospector, said he thought the MacMillans had failed in their duty to the public not releasing their assay results until after the speculation had passed its peak.
