

Everytime we write this column we gain added respect for those fellows who earn their living by turning out a column every day of the week. We have many wonderful columnists across Canada who through their writings, entertain and stimulate public thinking on current subjects of the day. Depending on our personal point of view we can either love them or hate them.

Those who contain themselves within that area where it is hard to generate any feelings of animosity concerning what they write include Bruce West, of the Toronto Globe and Mail; Frank Trumpane, of the Toronto Telegram; and Douglas Fisher, of the same paper. These fellows can turn out a column almost any day of the week that is stimulating and refreshing. There are other columnists, such as Zubor Link whose political bias sends us up the wall every time his column appears.

Writers of a special nature must include Arthur Ford, editor emeritus of the London Free Press and Gregory Clark of Week End magazine. Here are two old timers who must laugh at times, at the efforts of the naive (so-called) Journalists who are still wet behind the ears. These two stalwarts generally restrict themselves to a weekly column but for those who read their message it contains enough to last a week.

There are other writers, such as Charles Lynch, whose material features the Southern Press. Charlie is pretty keen to the current Political situation and anyone who would denounce him as a sincopeop had better reassess their own thinking. He has been around the anchor desk of CTO-TV on election night. He was competing in that instance with Norman DePoe (CBC). The latter's qualities are greatly reduced by the slanting of objective journalism to the realm of his own prejudices.

Thinking of DePoe brings our mind to our old friend Sam Morris who spouts off in the nearby Port Dover Maple Leaf. Sam is in favor of anything in Canada so long as it is Liberal. Sam even voted for Jack Roxburgh in the last election. At least he said that was how he was going to vote. So if we take Sam's support away poor Jack only ended up with a majority of 108. We would assume that if Sam hadn't declared his intentions Jack's majority could have conceivably been much higher. That could be an indication of the influence of those who put words into print.

We are not condemning Sam's forthrightness in expressing his opinions through the columns of his newspaper. In fact we'd greatly enjoy seeing more of his personal opinion material in every weekly newspaper in the Country. In fact we'd like to see Bruce Pearce give Otto King a little editorial leeway so he could announce that the editor of the Jarvis Record is due in his office any day now to fulfill an election duty that could render both harmless for the next 24-hour period. It has happened before.

In the meantime let us have respect for those who have the courage to put their opinions in print and thereby be counted in any situation.
