We were absent from the confines of the Village for four or five days over the past week-end and our hopes for a complete restoration of the community in that period were painfully dissipated on our return. In fact things looked very much as they did when we went away. How much easier it would have been had the installation of waterworks and sewage taken place back in 1932 when an effort in that direction was made before. The traffic would have been about fifty percent lighter, the cost would have been minor in comparison with todays prices and the Village would not, in the interval, have sunk to the depths that we now find we will have to recover from.

This is one reason why we are hesitant to complain these days about some of the ideas of the young people. Back in 1932 we were one of those young people and some of the patriarchs of our community there were quick to point out that our ideas for progress had no merit in fact. They were partly convincing because we didn't exercise the conviction of our own judgement in those days. If we had we'd probably not be suffering through the problems that are presently so irritating.

But, have strength folks, it's got to be done and we must be through the worst of it. By the end of the year we'll surely have something to start re-building on and, before the Centennial year is over, there will be a revival of spirit that will restore this little community to a sense of pride and joyous living. We can see the dust removed from the mans, residences, we can see the sprinklers greening up the lawns and we can see flowers flourishing about every home. This is what we need to make this a pleasant residential community. Then, too, we'll have a revival of business and those engaged in commercial enterprise in the Village will add to their facilities and again make this a community centre for the immediate countryside.

Naturally, in the four or five days we were away, we headed for the Northland. There is nothing to compare with the clear, fresh air of Northern Ontario. In August, the black flies are usually on vacation, and they were this year. The water levels in the lakes are high and this covers the driftwood that usually spoils the shoreline The fish were biting and the hospitality of our Hosts was superb. It always is.

Once again we saw the productiveness of the North. We met a farmer by the name of Fred Lambert who produces the finest vegetables and berries anywhere in the world. Mr Lambert has a holding of 22 acres and the immaculate buildings, including his home, were built from lumber he and his family cut out of the bush at the back of his farm. His ambition in life is to grow the finest produce anywhere in the world. He is not concerned with the bright lights of Timmins, the closest community to his habitation, and, in fact, hasn't been there for years. He is now annoyed by the fact the Texas Gulf and Sulphur Corporation is building a pipe line past his place to obtain water for the Fredrickhouse River for their concentrator at Hoyle. Only a vent pipe from the waterline shows, but Mr. Lambert says this spoils his view of nature. We'd be a happier race if we had more of the philosophy and spirit of Mr. Lambert.

Now it's back to work We hope Rasty was able to tear himself away from the Shangrila he took off to last week. If he didn't, you'll never see this in print.

"You can seed too early", advises Ontario Agricultural College crop scientist Dr. N.C. Stoskopf, who planted barley and spring wheat several different times in the first four months of this year.

In Dr. Stoskopf's experiment, he broadcasted barley and spring wheat January 5th, February 15th, once each week in March, and April 4th, and even the April 4th planting was a month ahead of the usual practice. What were the results? "No seeds developed in the January 5th planting, the February 15th test only grew a few twigs," Dr. Stoskopf reports, "and maybe the early March seed would have produced more if some of the seed hadn't been washed away by the spring thaw and if pigeons hadn't found it delicious. However, stands from the last seeding in March and the one sown on April 4th were tremendous!

"Seeding before March 10th is too risky. Frost might kill the germinating seed But, seed sown after this date has every factor in its favor. Crops planted early not only mature early enough to escape drought but also diseases like rust and mildew. Early seeding promotes higher tillering or stooling. With a higher grain per straw ratio, the straw develops into a short stocky plant with greater lodging resistance. This greater lodging resistance means that more nitrogen - as much as 50 pounds - can be applied without the crop falling over. This higher fertility, of course, means larger yields.

"The only drawback is water and mud", Dr. Stoskopf adds. "If a tractor with wide balloon-like wheels were developed, then a farmer could float through planting."

VISITS QUEBEC

Miss Sharon North, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter North, has returned home from Quebec where she was chosen by the teaching staff of Hagersville High to represent their school.

This trip was sponsored by the Canadian Centennial Youth Travel Program. A student participating was to be a good citizen of the school and a worthy representative of the province.

The purpose of this trip was to acquaint young Canadians with another province of Canada first hand in geography, political and educational institutions, cultural and industrial achievements and the beauty and variety of the Canadian scenes.

Sharon found the visit immensely enjoyable and informative and appreciated the opportunity of being able to go to Quebec.

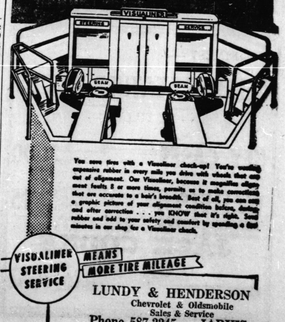
RED CROSS IS ALWAYS THERE WITH YOUR HELP

The Machine That Keeps Rubber On Your Wheels



The more miles a tire runs the closer it comes to the end of alignment. Our Visualiner, because it shows you your tires as if we were looking at them from above, can measure to a hair's breadth how far out of alignment they are. Get rid of the guesswork. Get a graphic picture of your wheels before buying. Ask for a free Visualiner check. Remember, you SHOW that it's right, the customer can see it for himself. Best of all, you can see the Visualiner is one step to a Visualiner check.
