

Under Wide Skies

By Rosemary Hill

No man can know what pain or pleasure he evokes in others, merely by the act of his existence. Our daily lives tend to fall naturally into a routine that varies only slightly from day to day, week to week. A holiday or an illness may interrupt our pattern for a time, but some unexpected change in circumstances may force us to adopt an entirely new routine, but somehow there is always a pattern. Although we usually think of our lives only in terms of ourselves, our routines become strangely intertwined with those of the people who hold us happily anticipating a family reunion in a few weeks that we have been looking forward to for several months. The reunion will bring home the eldest member of our family who has been living on the other side of the world for the past two and a half years. It is gratifying to know that his trip to bring her husband with her and two grandchildren who might have difficulty recognizing their old grandparents. We anticipate the reunion will be most pleasant if we can only keep Grandma under control. Preparation for the Minstrel Show is going to be on a tight...

CHURCH NOTES
