PORT DOVER - Private developers have as much responsibility as municipalities to provide adequate recreation space for future residents along the Lake Erie shoreline.

This was advocated last Weds. by Dr. E. G. Pleva, chairman of the geography department at the University of Western Ontario, told about 50 municipal planners and officials that Norfolk, Haldimand and Elgin municipalities and industrial developers should cooperate to provide parkland near planned industrial sites.

Dr. Pleva was speaking during an Erie Region Economic Council meeting designed to assess local thoughts about the impact of economic development along the north shore of Lake Erie.

The Steel Company of Canada plans a multi-million dollar steelmaking complex on 6,600 acres of Norfolk and Haldimand land, and Dominion Foundries and Steel Company has purchased or obtained options on 5,000 acres in Elgin County, east of Port Burwell.

Local officials expressed concern over the recreational potential of Lake Erie and the possibility of pollution. Dr. Pleva emphasises industries along the St. Clair River near Detroit actually compete to landscape their individual waterfront areas.

Municipal officials in the three affected lake counties should not hesitate to negotiate with Dofasco and Stelco to provide open space, he suggested.

"Everyone has an obligation - even the private sector. It seems to me in our regional thinking that if we have a large steel complex we shouldn't say our plans for our shoreline should be abandoned," Dr. Pleva said.

He contended that the Elgin County area now destined for Dofasco's development had been earmarked by Queen's Park as a provincial park.

"There is nothing incompatible with parks and industrial land. There shouldn't be anyway," he said.

No Decision On Garbage Disposal Plan

No decision has been reached as to what garbage disposal system will be employed in Haldimand County in the future.

New provincial air pollution regulations have forced municipalities into finding alternate methods of disposal.

Last month municipal officials looked at plans for a 960-cubic-yard open-pit burner that reduces garbage to five percent of its original volume.

County council is now comparing the cost of the incinerator to the costs of compacting garbage with a bulldozer.

Walpole Reeve Hugh Greenfield noted that landfill sites are becoming scarce and consequently incineration is more favourable.

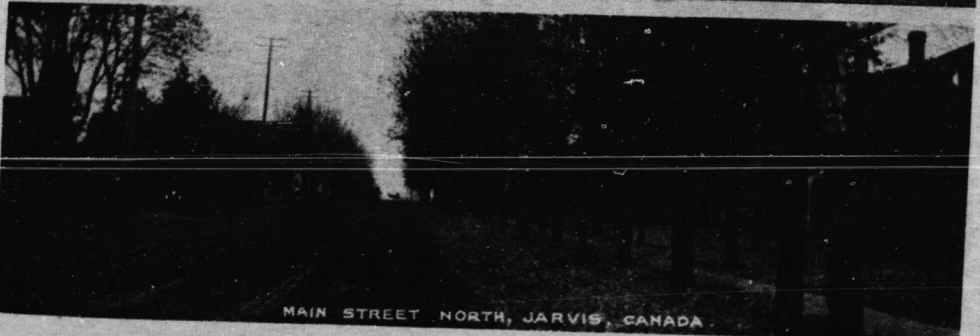

However, Haldimand Warden Ernest Craddock said it would be at least a year before any county-wide system would be a reality.

The giant multi-flue stack at Ontario Hydro's Nanticoke power plant on Lake Erie will tower 635 feet. Rising swiftly at the rate of 100 feet a week, it will be the first of its type to reach this height on the continent.

Crews from Canadian Kellogg Limited, Toronto, are working 24 hours a day, five days a week, in the continuous slip form method of placing concrete. In this photo the 52 million stack, shown alongside framework for one of the four boiler housings, is about 200 feet high. It is to be finished in early September.

A reinforced concrete shell will reach 635 feet. Four mild-steel flues, one for each generating unit, are built within the shell and extend another 20 feet above it. With four separate flues inside the single stack, the concentration of heat forces higher dispersion of gases into the upper atmosphere.

Power from the first unit is due in 1971. Remaining units will feed power into the provincial grid at the rate of one a year until by 1974 the full two million kilowatts capacity is reached.
