Bank Inspector Frauds

Staff Superintendent James L. Erskine of the O.P.P. Anti-Rackets Branch, reports a recurrence of "Bank Inspector Frauds" this year. While there have been some arrests, prosecution is very difficult because the "voice" on the telephone cannot be identified, and the "pick-up" man appears only for a few moments at the elderly person's door.

Any time during banking hours of a weekday, the telephone may ring in an average middle-class home - usually that of an elderly widow. The male caller, in a very business-like and authoritative manner, will identify himself as either a "bank official" or a member of the Police Department, presently investigating a dishonest bank employee suspected of tampering with the customer's account.

The caller will then, in a very persuasive tone, obtain from the victim information concerning the amount of money on deposit in her account. He will then request that she go to the bank and withdraw a substantial sum of money from her account. As part of the scheme, the victim is advised that in making this withdrawal, she will also be advised not to tell anyone. The caller may offer to pick her up, send a taxi, meet her at a pre-determined rendezvous, or imply that she may have received counterfeit money in a recent withdrawal and he will take and examine it for her. If she expresses doubt that the caller is a police officer or a bank official, he will tell her to hang up and call back, however, he will keep her line open by not hanging up and when she dials, he will answer accordingly.

Relatives And Friends Of Elderly People Should Impress Upon Them That They Should Never - Under Any Circumstances - Withdraw Money From Their Bank Accounts, When Approached In This Manner. They Should ALWAYS Consult The Police, or Their Bank Manager Personally.
