We Enter An New Era

The Record is entering a new era because of the new developments to the south and we must keep up with the times.

We urge you, the members of this community, to prepare for this along with us to ensure you won't lose out to people with fresh ideas and probably larger companies, which will be moving into the area. Along with these will come workers and their families who will be settling here during the next few years.

The Jarvis Board of Trade should be reactivated and given a fresh shot in the arm. Its president should take it upon himself to call meetings and make plans for the new developments in the area.

Keep a sharp eye on what is coming and remember the more that is done now the greater will be the benefits of the future.

The influx into the area is expected to be in the thousands. The first of these will be construction people and they will probably be here for at least seven years.

Planning is the key to the future of this community and it must be done by private organizations as well as public ones. We must be prepared to meet the future head on with as many of the problems likely to arise solved ahead of time that is humanly possible.

Commercial assessments must be balanced with residential. This will require us to attract new business as well as industry. This could be a very worthwhile task performed by the Board of Trade.

An Oath Of Vengeance

Take notice, Sam H. Morris, editor and publisher of the Port Dover Maple Leaf. You are again in a war of words with The Record.

L. A. Miller, former editor and publisher of The Record, has sworn the new editor to an oath of vengeance for those blows below the belt from your pen in the past.

Come down out of your mighty penthouse and take a look about you. New things are happening and we want you to be alert.

WE know that for the past few days it has taken some doing to make it from your residence at 909 Main St. to the office at 351 Main St. because of adverse weather conditions but we've all been working under the same handicap.

We wonder, however, where the editorials have been featured in your paper. I looked in vain through the Dec. 27 issue and again in the Jan. 3rd, issue. All the color looked nice (in fact it was wild) but I failed to see where you reminded your faithful readers of their duties and commitments for the upcoming year.

If you ever get past the commercial fisheries in the eastern section of your town you will see a giant is lurking there ready to bring thousands of people into the area.

We acknowledge that this was a sneaky blow but we are open for negotiations. We believe the best way to win a war is through hit and run tactics — happy new year Sam.

Giant at the Crossroads

Most Constructive Step

The concept of one general farm organization may be the most constructive step taken by people of the agriculture industry in many a year.

The transaction of getting the idea into a working body may be another thing altogether. Delegates at the agriculture conference in Toronto last week voted to accept the idea. Ontario Agriculture Minister Stewart said he would take the matter to the provincial cabinet to act upon legislation requested by the conference, which was to provide for a compulsory checkoff.

This means that each farmer would provide a percentage of his income to finance the organization. The catch is whether this would be done on an equalized basis or by deducting from the gross earnings of each commodity group, which has been the bone of contention between the Ontario Farmers Union and the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. The two groups made no progress in setting up a one general farm organization because of a proposal to have both membership fees and checkoffs.

If the commodity groups have to pay according to their gross earnings on a product, some groups such as the tobacco growers, who are small in numbers, will be paying far more into the organization than other much larger farm groups. This may leave room for protest.

Therefore it would seem reasonable for the government to study a formula before passing any legislation that would be fair without putting larger portions of the financial burden on any particular group.

Farm Income Report Is Of Prime Concern

The chief topic of discussion at many farm meetings this month is the recommendations of the Special Committee on Farm Income. This committee has done a commendable job on studying the farm income problem in Ontario.

Though its solutions may seem to be ahead of their time, we should not dismiss these ideas too quickly. This report merits the study of every farmer and every farm organization in Ontario.

The recommendation which is of prime concern is one general farm organization. Without this, agriculture will have little control over its own destiny, and we will have to accept more direction from government. Farm people would be well advised to take every opportunity available to make their views known on this report and its suggestions at commodity group meetings, township federation of agriculture meetings, etc., in the next few months.

The Annual Banquet of the Haldimand County Federation of Agriculture will be held on Friday, February 7th with the Rev. John Roberts of Sprucedale School as guest speaker.
