It's good as far as it goes....

The head restraints in 1969 automobiles are designed to reduce injuries due to rear-end collisions. Restraints should help minimize some of the unpleasant effects of these all-too-common crashes, but their causes can be dealt with only by drivers. There are a number of things you can do to help prevent rear-end collisions. Here are some of them.

Don't let yourself be crowded by the driver behind. If someone follows you too closely for safety, encourage him to pass - by pulling off the road if necessary. Signal your intentions - to make a turn, change lanes, or stop suddenly. Signal an intended stop by pumping your brake pedal to flash the brakelights.

Don't crowd the driver ahead - leave at least one car length for each 10 miles of speed. And remember that high speeds and poor weather conditions demand extra stopping distance. At night, or in rain or fog, allow for reduced visibility or decreased traction.

Limited-access highways have made higher speeds common. As a result drivers need to be especially wary of slow-moving or stopped vehicles. Stay alert - be particularly attentive near controlled intersections where vehicles ahead may be slowing, turning, and stopping. Watch for slower-moving merging traffic. Use acceleration and deceleration lanes to change your own speed when entering or leaving a high-speed highway. Prevent secondary collisions at an accident scene by getting off the roadway quickly if you decide to stop.

Be a defensive driver - constantly watch the traffic around you and plan for any foreseeable emergency.
