Nail Biting Result Of Tension

Nail biting, like thumb sucking, is a method a child uses to get relief from some stress or anxiety too great for him, says the federal health department publication, "Up the Years from One to Six".

The uneasiness causing the nail-biting is often hard to discover. It could show up in a child who is forced to be inactive too long, who hasn't enough running, climbing or free play. Too much excitement, nagging, punishing, bossing, can make a child jittery as well.

Nails are tough and insensitive and so lend themselves to biting. Once this biting has begun, the rough edges of the nail and the exposed nail bed tend to cause irritation and so strengthen the habit.

Direct restraint such as bandages may stop nail biting but will intensify the nervous tension which is the true cause of the difficulty.

One of the first steps in soothing a nail biter is to make his nails smooth and lessen the irritation by soaking them in something like olive oil. Scolding,

Lake Erie Water Improves

Dunnville's water has been going untreated except for the usual chlorination for the past week. PUC Manager John Dawson said Monday.

The water coming from Lake Erie has been of higher quality than usual and the filtering process has been very successful in producing clean water, Mr. Dawson said.

Previous to this, Dunnville's water was noted to be slightly off colour because of the ice break on Lake Erie.
