YOU need this

when deep-fat frying

French fried potatoes, chicken, and many other foods are delicious when prepared in your deep-fat fryer. But, for safety's sake, keep the frying temperature at the proper level by using and watching a cooking thermometer.

The flash point, or temperature at which the vapours from the boiling fat can be ignited by a match flame or spark, is less than 100 degrees above the maximum frying temperature of 400 degrees. And the ignition temperature, at which the hot fat itself can burst into flame, is only about 200 degrees higher than the flash point.

Therefore, it is very important to keep the frying temperature to a controlled, safe level.

Never leave your fryer unattended while warming fat to frying temperature. Because heat from the stove element under the fryer cannot escape rapidly, the temperature of the fat rises quickly. It can increase past the frying level to flash point and ignition stages in the time you might take to answer the door or telephone. If you are interrupted by a call during frying, be sure to turn down the element under your fryer. Don't rely on fryer thermostats - although they help reduce the danger of overheating, they don't always work.

Would you like to enjoy safer deep-fat frying in your home? CIAG has a limited supply of reliable, deep-fat frying thermostats available at cost. To obtain one, please complete the attached coupon and send it with your cheque or money order for $1 (includes 5% sales tax) to CIAG INSURANCE.
