Equip Boat For Night Operation

Want to increase the amount of time you can spend on the water?

Then equip your boat for night operation, advise the boating experts. Instead of heading for home at sunset, you can enjoy the cool of evening afloat and the fun of moonlight cruising.

Operating at night is easy if you are familiar with your local waters. Move at reduced speed at all times, and throttle down to idling speed about the water ahead. Carry a long paddle, boat hook or other pole with which to probe water depth.

A legal set of navigation lights is required for night boating. In most waters minimum equipment consists of a white light at the stern, visible two miles in all directions, and a combination light mounted near the bow, which shows red to port and green to starboard. Each color must be visible from dead ahead to two points abaft the beam (the correct arc of visibility is built into the light).

Besides navigation lights, you should have a really good flashlight, and a spotlight for mounting on deck or on your windshield. Some spotlights are remote-controlled from the dashboard, some are swung about by hand. Some can be lifted off their brackets for hand use. One kind sticks to the back of the windshield and shines forward when under way, but can be detached for sweeping the horizon.

Locate all lights so they don't shine in the driver's eyes.

Dudley Bristow Opens Norfolk County Fair

Dudley Bristow, Director of Education for the Norfolk County Board of Education, officially opened the Norfolk County Fair on Tuesday.

Dollars And Good Sense

This column is a regular weekly feature prepared by the Family Financial Counseling Service of the Avco Delta Corporation, P. O. Box 2820, London, Ontario. All questions submitted to the above address will be answered in print or by return mail. Names will not be used in print. However, all questions should be accompanied by a complete name and address.

Dear Sir: Together my husband and I make over $16,000 a year. We're both 25 years old and feel this is a very good income. But the problem is should we just try to live on his salary and bank money or should my check also go for everyday living expenses, vacation, etc.?

Mrs. G. I. If you two can't live on $10,000 a year at your age and with no responsibility (you didn't mention any) in the area where you work and reside... you're in pretty bad shape. I know a number of young couples who make much less than that and are managing quite well.

The point is, Mrs. I., don't get used to living on that $16,000. It may not last forever. Suppose you were unable to continue working because of maternity reasons, etc.? if you have been living on the combined income, you would suddenly find yourselves shy almost 50% in the income department. That's a drastic reduction. So put your money where it will earn interest for you and work for that future home or whatever else your goals may be.

Dear Sir: What do you think of a husband who gives his wife a certain allowance each week and expects her to run the house with it? It's been the same for the past several years.

Mrs. D. W. Not much! Nor, on the other hand, do I think much of a wife who won't demand more money for household expenses.

Realistically, however, I don't know how I can help you in this case unless, perhaps, you show this column to your husband. If you can't convince him that the cost of living has sky-rocketed then I don't know who can.

There is a little trick you can try. It really isn't a trick. It's actually a very simplified type of budget. Take a piece of paper and draw a line down the middle. On one side, label it "expenses" and list here all the items you spend money on during the week. Everything. On the other side of the line, enter under "income" the amount your husband gives you. Then, subtract "expenses" from "income" and enter the results at the bottom center of page, underscored.

If he doesn't get this message, Mrs. W., ask him if he will try running the household for a week on the same amount you receive.

In his opening address, Mr. Bristow emphasized the importance of The County Fair to the school children. He said that "Through participation in the Fair and through consideration of what it is attempting to do, young people are able to consider the whole life of the community and their part in it."

Following is the remainder of Mr. Bristow's address: The Directors of the Norfolk County Fair and those who have preceded them deserve to be congratulated for establishing and for improving over the years this focus for the work and the achievements of the community.

The displays and the prizes awarded, the efforts put forth by those who do not gain a prize as well as by the prize-winners all contribute towards the goal of excellence, the desire to do something really well. The Fair is the opportunity for young and old to gather together to see what has been done in the County and to obtain fresh inspiration for what can be accomplished.

County Fair is one good Catholic Separate School opportunity. Through participation in the Fair and for the exuberance of youth through consideration of what it is attempting to do, this day of official opening, young people are able to and look forward to more of consider the whole life of the same in the years to community and their part in come.

In congratulating all those who have worked so hard to make this Fair an outstanding one in Ontario, and realizing how anxious you all are to plunge into the events of the afternoon, I take great pleasure and deem it an honour on behalf of education and the schools to declare this Norfolk County Fair - 1969 NOW OFFICIALLY OPEN.
