On The Farm Front

S. B. Williams, deputy minister, Canada Department of Agriculture, is quoted as saying "The immediate future looks rough for the Canadian dairy industry. Projections indicate 72,000 dairy farms in 1980 compared with 309,000 in the 1961 census."

Mr. Williams predicts larger herds, but does not expect to see many herds of 200 or more cows. He expects most of the lowering of production costs will be reached by a specialized two-man operation with improved management systems.
