

They Missed Something ...if only a Christmas party

One astrologer ruined his reputation by writing in bad humor. "People born under the sign of Capricorn, which extends Dec. 21-Jan. 19, get about the worst break in the astrological calendar." He attached significance to the Capricorn's being synonymous with goat, and made inference that Capricorn people tend to be thick in skull, obstinate, and "goats" by circumstance.

This interpretation is belied by the numbers of persons born Capricorn under old or new calendars, who have achieved unflawed greatness in pursuits requiring open-mindedness, imagination, excellence in talents. (After all, Billy, goats are adept in meeting obstacles head on or leaping over them!) The only circumstance suggestive of Capricorn people being ill-fated is having birthdays in such proximity to Christmas and New Years Day as to deprive them in younger years of birthday parties of their very own.

Primacy of Capricorn astrologically begins coincidentally with winter solstice in Northern Hemisphere, summer solstice in Southern Hemisphere, prevalence of Halcyon Days everywhere.

greatness is apparent in even a brief roll of persons whose birthdays occurred between Dec. 21 and Jan. 6 - the Twelfth Night when Yuletide festivities traditionally ended. A merely representative few:

Dec. 21: Benjamin Disraeli, statesman; Jean Henri Fabre, naturalist.

Dec. 22: Deems Taylor, musician.

Dec. 23: Charles Saint-Beuve, writer, philosopher; Anthony Trollope and Ward Greene, novelists; Giacomo Puccini, composer.

Dec. 24: Christopher "Kit" Carson, Far Western trailblazer; Humphrey Bogart, actor; Howard Hughes, financier; Ava Gardner, actress (one of the beauties of whom Hughes was enamoured).

Dec. 25: Isaac Newton, scientist; Paul Manship, sculptor; Evangeline Booth, humanitarian; Robert L. Ripley, "Believe It or Not" artist-creator; Rebecca West (nom-de-plume of Cecily Fairfield) and Michael Sadleir, novelists; Gladys Swarthout, opera diva; Cabell "Cab" Calloway, musician.

Dec. 26: Thomas Gray, poet; Geo. Romney, artist; Mrs. E'DEN Southworth, novelist.

Dec. 27: Johann Kepler and Louis Pasteur, See Next Page

Isaac Newton, discoverer of universal law of gravity in 1685.
